Chairman of Steel Corporation Denies Morgan Dominates
Big Company

UNDERSELL COMPETITORS
Ownership of Railroad Lines Reduces Operating Costs,
Gary Admits

By Associated Press
New York—Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation testifying before the Lockwood legislative committee Friday thwarted efforts of Samuel Untermyer, committee counsel, to draw from him admissions that J. P. Morgan dominated the corporation.

"Is it not a fact that J. P. Morgan names the directors?" Mr. Untermyer asked.

"Certainly not," retorted Mr. Gary. "Who does name them?"

"The stockholders."

"Who really names them?" Mr. Untermyer persisted.

"I'll have to admit and claim," said Mr. Gary, "that I do more of that than any one else and always have."

Mr. Untermyer then tried to get Mr. Gary to admit that he and Mr. Morgan together controlled the corporation, and that the other five members of the finance committee which he had testified selected the directors, were mere "Rubber Stamps."

"That is not a fact," said Mr. Gary. "The other members aid in their selection."

The belief that the firm of Morgan controlled the United States Steel Mr. Gary continued, probably rose from the fact that the banking house "in a sense organized" the corporation.

It was left to the late J. P. Morgan, he said, to fix the relative values of the companies entering the merger.

The older Morgan, Mr. Gary admitted, in response to a question named the first board of directors.

"He named you," said Mr. Untermyer.

"Wholly?" Mr. Untermyer insisted.

Referring to the junior J. P. Morgan, Mr. Gary testified he had never shown any desire to dominate the corporation and that he served merely as one of seven members of the finance committee.

"If you forgo the $3 or $5 profit that you earn over the independents, is it not a fact that you could quickly exterminate them?" Mr. Untermyer asked.

"That is not a practical question," Judge Gary retorted, adding that a "ruthless driving out of competition" would result in dissolution of the corporation under the Sherman act.

"Then you have to behave yourself?"

"Yes for two reasons: First, because it is right to do so, and second, because we have to do so."

Mr. Gary conceded the difference in costs was largely accounted for by the fact that the United States Steel corporation owned more than 1,500 miles of railroad connecting its plants with ore centers.

Mr. Gary said United States Steel would object strongly to being divorced from the railroads, asserting he did not believe ownership of the lines gave the corporation an unfair advantage over its competitors, such as was held to exist in the Reading case.

"In a concern doing such an immense business as the United States Steel corporation," he declared, "it is necessary to own railroads. If we had to depend on the will and disposition of independent railroads, whose service is devoted primarily to the interest of the general public, we could not be assured of good service."

Mr. Gary asserted the steel corporations rail lines gave independent steel companies as good service as it got itself and declared he had never heard a complaint as to discrimination.

BONUS BILL IS APPROVED BY LEGION HEADS

Veterans Organization Hopes to Force Immediate Consideration of Measure

EXPECT HARDING SUPPORT
Feeling in Senate Favors Settling One Way or Other This Session

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1922, by Post Pub. Co.
Washington—The American Legion's legislative committee is thoroughly satisfied with the bonus bill as reported by the senate finance committee. The changes made in the house bill are unobjectionable.

The next step is to insure enough votes to give the measure right of way over the tariff. This is admitted by a hard proposition for while the legion has enough votes pledged to pass the bill itself there's a complication involved in getting the tariff displaced. Some members of the senate who favor the bonus may be found voting against a motion to displace the tariff. By the time the American Legion's representatives get through their campaign of persuasion—and they have been pretty effective about it thus far—enough votes are expected to be obtained to force a vote on the bonus. Speech-making on the bonus is inevitable—those who are to vote against it being as anxious to tell their constituents the reason therefore as the senators who favor it are anxious to demonstrate how actively they fought to put the measure through.

But no filibuster is expected. The sentiment of the senate is in favor of disposing of the issue this session one way or the other. Undue delay is not for a moment considered though to be sure there may be some prolonged argument on the motion to take the matter up and lay the tariff aside.

NONPARTISAN ISSUE

The issue is not partisan. The fact that three Democrats voted with six Republicans to report the measure to the senate is taken to mean that the bonus bill will receive Democratic support when it reaches a vote. The Democrats will naturally try to impose all sorts of amendments which would appear even more favorable to the soldiers but individually they will not assume responsibility for defeating the main bill.

American Legion headquarters here feels assured of sixty affirmative votes. In response to a questionnaire sent out by the legion, sixty senators, including Republicans and Democrats, stated positively that they would vote for the pending bill though several reserved the right to offer amendments. Only thirteen senators have told the legion that they would vote against the bonus. This leaves twenty-three who have not answered and it is predicted by the legion men that at least a half dozen more will climb the bandwagon when the voting begins. To pass the bill itself only forty-nine affirmative votes are needed. To pass it over a presidential veto, six-four votes are needed.

EXPECT HARDING SUPPORT

Curiously enough the legion representatives are confident President Harding will not veto the bill. Senator James Watson of Indiana, an intimate friend and political adviser of the president, has publicly predicted that Mr. Harding would reverse himself and sign the measure. Much significance is attached to the fact that although the president hinted that he would send a letter to Chairman McCumber of the finance committee, expressing opposition to the bill he failed to do so. It is contended that if Mr. Harding intended to do anything about the bonus bill he would have acted while the measure was in committee.

All indications now point to the passage of the measure despite the efforts made by interpreters of recent elections to persuade members of congress that the bonus is unpopular and a vote against it will help them next autumn as much as it will hurt. Reporting the bill out of the finance committee is a step forward in the slow but steady march of the bonus through both houses of congress.

RESIGNS

HAROLD F. MCCORMICK

By Associated Press

Chicago—Harold F. McCormick resigned as head of the International Harvester company Friday.

Declining reelection Mr. McCormick nominated Alexander Legge, vice president and general manager, who was unanimously elected.

An executive committee of five, selected from the board of directors, was created and Mr. McCormick was named chairman of the new body.

MAY INVOKE SWISS LAW TO HALT WEDDING

Compromise Seems to be in Air as McCormick's Quarrel Over Mathilde

Chicago—Contending factions of the erstwhile household of Harold F. McCormick were committed to a policy of compromise Thursday over the romantic affairs of Mathilde McCormick and her former riding master, Max Oser, Swiss horseman of Zurich.

Conferences between counsel for Mathilde's mother Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick and her divorced husband which saved her from an absent investigation in court Thursday were continued Friday.

Mr. McCormick's petition for an injunction to halt the marriage plans of Mathilde and the Swiss cavalry officer, Mr. McCormick playing the double role of father and guardian, has agreed to withhold consent of the marriage until Saturday.

Meanwhile the situation was made more complex by information from Zurich that the whole legal embroglio in Chicago is for naught. This information was to the effect that the Swiss law requires the consent of both parents if living, in the case of a bride under 20 years of age.

Mathilde, who is only 17, was given a guardian, it was said, so consent to the marriage could be given or denied according to her wishes.

Undaunted by the legal complications and the charges made by Mrs. McCormick that he is a fortune hunter with designs on both McCormick and Rockefeller millions, Oser, in reports from Zurich was said to be continuing plans for the marriage if nothing loomed to interfere.

City attorneys for Mr. and Mrs. McCormick asserted that no basis for a final compromise on the proposed international marriage had been reached.

NOTED WISCONSIN EDUCATOR IS DEAD

Dr. Harvey President of Stout Institute Died at Menomonie Thursday

By Associated Press

Menomonie, Wis.—Dr. Lorenzo Dow Harvey, 74 years of age, president of Stout Institute here since 1908 and nationally known educator, died Thursday at his home here from heart trouble following an acute attack of angina pectoris on Wednesday. He had been in poor health for nearly two years but had performed his usual duties until 24 hours before his death.

Dr. Harvey, a leader in Wisconsin educational circles for years, had been president of the Normal school at Milwaukee and was state superintendent of education before coming to Menomonie in 1903, when he assumed charge of all schools in this city.

His wife and two married daughters survive.

Bucharest, Rumania—The entire Rumanian royal family will travel in state to Belgrade early next week for the wedding of Princess Marie of Rumania to King Alexander of Yugoslavia.

The Duke of York will represent the English royal family. The wedding ceremony will take place at 11 o'clock Thursday.

All the Serbian traditions and superstitions will be scrupulously observed. The bride will not cross the threshold of her future home until she is married. On entering her new abode she will carry a loaf of bread and a jug of wine as symbols of the joy and plenty which she brings the king. Under the old custom she will wear articles of clothing for herself and her husband.

The new queen then will kiss a male child, in observance of custom intended to insure her first born being a son.

Escanaba, Mich.—Two solemn requiem high masses were sung Friday morning at St. Patrick's catholic church here for the late Rev. Dr. Francis Xavier Barth, who died Tuesday morning after an illness which developed two years ago because of overwork on behalf of his parish.

The body of Father Barth was taken to Marquette.

Business in Escanaba was suspended until noon Friday; flags were flown at half mast and schools were closed out of respect for the memory of the dead priest.

Father Barth, who was 52 years old, was well known in Appleton. He was the principal speaker at a Knights of Columbus banquet here a few years ago and visited here on several other occasions. Father Barth was born in Waupun and was ordained in Belgium.

Enter Purple Pajamas In Actor's Bigamy Case

By Associated Press
Los Angeles—Whether the preliminary hearing of Rudolph Valentino, film actor, on a bigamy charge would be resumed Friday afternoon was uncertain.

When adjournment was taken Thursday after a day of colorful testimony in support of the state's charge, J. W. Hanky, justice of the peace, said the hearing would be resumed Friday if the actor's attorneys were ready and, if not, the case would be taken up Saturday.

The state has at least two more witnesses to call in its effort to prove Valentino committed bigamy when he went through a marriage ceremony at Mexcala, Lower California, May 19, with Winifred de Wolf, known as Winifred Shaunesey-Hudnut, and as Natalia Rambova, a motion picture art director.

It was on January 10 of this year that Valentino obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce here from Jean Acker, motion picture actress, but under the California laws he was not permitted to remarry until the decree was made final which would not be before January 10, 1923.

The state contends that when Valentino brought Miss Hudnut back into the country he was living with her a few days at Palm Springs, in Riverside county, he committed bigamy.

Miss Acker has already testified concerning her marriage to Valentino. Other witnesses told of having seen the actor and Miss de Wolf—the name she used at the ceremony—at Mexcala—wearing purple pajamas during a breakfast and on an automobile ride at Palm Springs.

Morgan And Baker Are Choice Of Conference

Baker Wins Over Catlin; Close Vote

Political Leaders Vastly Surprised at Defeat of Local Man—Catlin Pledges Support of Conference Nominee and Platform.

Appleton people and political leaders of the state were vastly surprised Thursday night when the Republican Citizens conference in Milwaukee nominated John F. Baker, Madison, assistant in the attorney general's office, over Mark S. Catlin for attorney general. Up until the conference political posters were sure Catlin would win the nomination inasmuch as he had been promised the support of influential men in all parts of the state.

Baker's nomination was assured on the first ballot when he received slightly more than 400 votes to 370 for Catlin and a few for Alvin Peterson. Catlin and Peterson then withdrew to make the nomination unanimous for Baker.

"Mr. Baker received the nomination at Milwaukee and I will do all that I can to help him win the Republican nomination in the primaries," Mr. Catlin said Friday morning. "I am entirely in accord with the platform adopted at the conference and will support all of the nominees."

Mr. Catlin was placed in nomination by J. P. Frank, C. A. Lamoreux, Asa Land and James Drought, of Milwaukee, and several others. He received a large ovation. Most of the counties in this section of the state and also in parts where he expected little strength were for him. Outagamie county was represented by 22 delegates and voted unanimously for Mr. Catlin.

CONFERENCE PLATFORM

The representatives of the people of every county in Wisconsin in republican state conference assembled to reclaim the right to council together. Our political parties have been disorganized. The councils of the people have been destroyed. There remains nothing but the personal followings of those ambitious for office and these too often make their own platform as a mere snare to catch votes.

We are determined that there shall be a new regime in which the citizens shall arise, determine the principals for which they stand and compel candidates and public officials to recognize and obey the popular will.

We no longer have representative government in Wisconsin. It has been abolished by the design of dictatorial bosses, who automatically name candidates. It has been aided by many laws which permit candidates who have no affiliation with party platform or standards of parade falsely under a party banner. We demand that the primary law shall be so amended that, without removing the power of the people for free expression to eliminate bossism.

BOOM FOR BOSSHARD

Enthusiasm for Mr. Boshard, chairman of the convention started when Crawford and Lincoln county delegates swung to him although his name was not in nomination. Cheering at every mention of his name, his delegation had a landslide on the way when the chairman rose and said that because of his obligation as an officer of the convention he would be obliged to give the nomination to give him. Ganfield was then selected almost unanimously over Leatham Smith and W. H. Hutton of New London.

The endorsement of Attorney General Morgan was given late in the afternoon and showed an overwhelming preference for his nomination. Delegates gave the attorney general an ovation following his selection on the first ballot by a more than four to one vote.

Martin Paulson, Stevens Point, a law student at the University of Wisconsin and former overseas service man, was the dark horse candidate of the convention. Without knowledge that his name was to be placed in nomination for secretary of state, Paulson saw endorsement given him by the 1,000 delegates without opposition.

FIVE CANDIDATES

Five candidates in the field for this place on the ticket followed the lead of Assemblyman David J. Summerfield of Ladysmith and withdrew their names when demand was made that a former soldier be given a place on the slate. Paulson, who is 27 years old and the youngest nominee for a state office, recently organized the Loyalty Legion at the university to oppose Senator La Follette.

In the contest for endorsement as a candidate for lieutenant governor Riley S. Young, speaker of the assembly, received 498 votes on the first ballot and S. J. Pullen, Fond du Lac 364. When the vote was announced the endorsement was made unanimous for Young by acclamation.

John F. Baker was given the endorsement for attorney general with 530 votes to 370 for Assemblyman Mark Catlin and scattering for Alvin Peterson. Assemblyman Catlin and Mr. Peterson withdrew to make the vote unanimous for Baker.

The nomination of Henry Johnson for treasurer was by acclamation. No other candidate was named to oppose Mr. Johnson, who for five consecutive terms has held his present office.

All candidates pledged support to the principles of the conference and declared for team work among those named by the convention during the campaign.

Permanent organization of the Citizens Republican state conference was completed Thursday, and the actual organization for the campaign set under way Friday. All candidates declared their intention of opening the contest at once against the La Follette faction.

Milwaukee — Dr. W. A. Ganfield, president of Carroll college, was named by the Citizens Republican State conference early Friday morning to head the ticket of state officers selected by its convention here, as candidate for United States Senator in opposition to Senator Robert M. LaFollette.

The conference late Thursday afternoon on the first ballot endorsed Attorney General William J. Morgan as candidate for governor, giving him 656 votes to 148 for Roy P. Wilcox and 113 for Andrew Kreutzer.

Nomination of Dr. Ganfield for the United States Senate was made by acclamation on motion of Leatham Smith, Sturgeon Bay, his opponent, after a boom for Otto Boshard had been halted by his statement to the delegates that he would refuse to accept the endorsement if given.

U. C. T.'S INVADE FOND DU LAC TODAY

More Than 200 Travelers and Artillery Band Make Showing at Convention

More than 200 Appleton people invaded Fond du Lac Friday to attend the big events of the state convention of United Commercial Travelers in session there for three days through Saturday. The Artillery band accompanied the delegation and will head the Appleton travelers in the parade at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon.

A large number of members of Appleton U. C. T. council and their families left on a special interurban car early in the morning. The remainder went by automobile. Most of them will return Friday evening but a number plan to remain for the Saturday program, which includes a boat ride.

The invitation to hold the convention here in 1934 seemed to be "going across" in Fond du Lac from all reports. The slogan, "Appleton wants you in 1934" placarded all over the streets, hotels and restaurants was in graining itself into the minds of the travelers and it is believed no other city will attempt to compete in inviting the 1934 gathering.

VERMEULEN PAYS FINE FOR SPEEDY DRIVING

PAGEANT TELLS STORY OF EARLY LAWRENCE DAYS

More Than 200 Students Take Part in Protrayal of History of College

The episodes of "The March," the pageant which will commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of Lawrence college bring in many interesting historical events out Lawrence which are not generally known. More than 200 students will take part in the production which is costing the college more than $1,000. A general invitation has been extended to all townspeople to be present for the historical presentation in Lawrence Memorial chapel on Tuesday afternoon and at the crowning of the May queen which will follow on the campus.

Mrs. Laura Lummus Schütz wrote the pageant after considerable study of the history of this section of the country and of the events which lead to the foundation of the college here. The pageant, which brings in the story of the Lost Dauphin of France, opens with a scene in the French court of Marie Antoinette. The next episode is a prison cell with Marie Antoinette praying for the Lost Dauphin. The scene then shifts to America showing Eleazar Williams and the Indians, then showing him selling his lands to Amos Lawrence. Lawrence was a friend indeed to Williams who is supposed to have been the Lost Dauphin and although he had no use for the land, bought it to help Williams out.

Other episodes include the pioneer settlers raising the necessary money to start the college, the early school days of the fifties, a symbolical scene of the Civil war and another of the world war. The pageant closes with a light episode, one in which a modern maiden and a modern youth bring back the ghosts of former college days. The other is a tribute to many love affairs which have taken place on the campus. Two students have had a platonic love affair for four years and refuse to fall in love. The Spirit of the Fox and the campus elves work magic on them and make them follow in the footsteps of other lovers at the college. The epilogue is given by Father Kane.

CHOIR PREPARING FOR SAENGERFEST

Maennerchor and Ladies Choir to Give Concert at Black Creek June 18

Appleton Maennerchor and ladies choir will attend the annual saengerfest at Sheboygan July 15 and 16. More than 40 strong. Their headquarters will be at Park hotel.

The saengerfest is to be one of the largest ever held in Wisconsin. Singing societies from all over the state are planning to attend and arrangements are being made for the accommodation of more than twice the number of visitors that attended the fest at Appleton a year ago.

The Maennerchor and ladies choir will give a concert in the auditorium at Black Creek Sunday evening, June 18. The program will be somewhat similar to the one presented at Appleton theatre two weeks ago.

The Maennerchor will hold its annual election of officers next Wednesday evening.

Monday Last Day To Sign For Lessons In Swimming

Fifty men and boys have signed their names to the blanks which will enroll them in the free swimming classes which open Monday at the municipal and Y. M. C. A. pools. The period for registering has been extended until Monday, and every man and boy in Appleton who is not a swimmer is privileged to join before that time.

Application cards have been supplied to downtown places and industrial plants and may be obtained at the Y. M. C. A. They are addressed to R. H. Starkey, physical director.

Names are to be classified and the learners grouped according to age.

A goal of not less than 200 swimmers during the coming two weeks is the Y. M. C. A. aim for the campaign. With no fees of any kind charged, and no requirement to be a "Y" member, it is expected that many will take advantage of the chance to learn this water sport.

Below is an application blank which may be filled out by those who have not obtained cards. This may be left at the Y. M. C. A. or sent there by mail. It should be in the hands of Mr. Starkey Monday.

But always are now he had forced and shivered her conscience with the belief that they were of one mind, it must and would be Reno first....

Now Nemo no longer held forth any promise of salvation, of the law's sanction, the church's countenance. Today and henceforward it must be all for love of... nothing... a break final and irreparable....

And for all the shock she had suffered, for all the wrong Lynn had done and the pain of which his ill-faith had been the cause, the love she had given the man still was dear, dangerously sweet and disarming. Already she was aware of anxiety to grasp at excuses for him, to comfort the ache in her heart with the thought that she was according charity to a dear strength to resist being sapped, flesh transgressor, already she felt her and spirit succumbing anew to the spell he knew too well how to weave.

The scales hung long in trembling. They returned only when Summerlad, unwisely, losing patience, sought to take by storm the lips she had not yet made up her mind to surrender, and thus aroused resistance till then dormant.

With an ease that in a queer, detached way she found surprising, she managed to break his embrace. Nevertheless the effect left her faint. She faltered to the fireplace and rested a hand on the mantel, her forehead upon the hand. Lynn followed, stood by her side. Over and over he murmured gently: "Linda, Linda, Linda...."

Shaking from head to foot she made a feeble sign of appeal. He disregarded this entirely, his arms again stole round her and would have drawn her to him but that, of a sudden, her mind caught at a straw of memory, she drew away, with a hand upon his bosom put him firmly from her, eyes that were melting none the less denying him, lips that were quivering with "Yes!" resolutely pronouncing "No!"

"You are cruel...."

"No, Lynn. Wait. Tell me something. You say she—your wife agreed to divorce you?"

"I made her promise," Summerlad asserted grimly.

"When was that? The day she disappeared? The day I found her dying senseless in her room?"

"I suppose so. Well, then—yes."

"Did you have much of a scene?"

"I'll say it was some stormy young session."

"Is that why you found it necessary to strike her?"

Summerlad started. "What! Strike her? What do you mean?"

But his eyes winced from her importunate regard.

"She—Nelly had a bruise on her cheek, that afternoon, and it wasn't an old bruise. Lynn, you struck her?"

"Perhaps. Maybe I did forget myself. What if I did?"

She asked for it, didn't she? No! No! No! half killed her if she'd stuck to her refusal to go back east!"

Realizing that his tongue was running away with his discretion, he curled back sharply, eyes that tanned curbed it sharply.

She started back in repulsion, but he overtook her in the middle of the room and again crushed her to him.

"Linda, Linda! what do the things matter? I love you, dearest, you love me, nothing else matters. For God's sake, be kind to me! Let's forget—"

The fury of her antagonism found him unprepared. Once more his arms were empty. And this time when he started in pursuit, something he couldn't see hit him brutally in the chest and threw him back. In the same instant he heard a heavy noise he couldn't account for. An inhuman sound. It shook the room, beat deafeningly upon one's ears. As if some one had overturned a heavy piece of furniture. Only no one had. Certainly he hadn't, certainly Lucinda hadn't. She was flattened against the farther wall watching him with a face of horror, blanched and gaping.

Enraged, he put forth all his strength to recover from that inexplicable blow. And instantly it was repeated. And again. Each time accompanied by that savage, crashing noise. Like thunder cut off short. And each time he reeled under the impact, and sickening pains shot through him, like knives white-hot. He felt himself sinking.

In expiring flashes of consciousness he saw Lucinda, still flat against the wall, staring not at him but at a French window nearby. Between it and curtains a woman's arm was thrust the hand grasping an automatic pistol with muzzle faintly fuming. There was a face of shadowed pallor dimly visible beyond the curtains, a face with wild exultant eyes.... Nelly's....

XXXX

To the woman flung to the wall by shock the moments immediately following that murderous fusillade were a raving welter of horrors.

Between two heartbeats she saw Lynn, with a face as blank as paper, spinning, toppling, beating the air with aimless arms, pitching to the floor like something blasted, resting there in a sickening, inert crumple; and was keenly aware of the acrid reek of smokeless powder cutting, as acid cuts oil, the sensuous scent of the roses that dressed the room in her honor; and all the while was conscious of the pistol nosing in between the draperies like an animate thing of infinite malice, and the pallid oval of the face behind it, that seemed to float in the dark as might the mask of some mad ghost.

As the din of those three shots lost weight and volume, a thin shouting became audible from some point outside the house, and Nelly Marquis, with the sweep of a fury, her eyes burning like black opals, broke through the hangings at the window, and pulling up with pistol leveled point-blank at Lucinda's breast.

A single thought persisted: Another instant and I shall be as Lynn.

Then abruptly through the window a dark and heavy body hurled and fastened upon the woman's back, swinging her aside, the pistol detaching with a bellow, the bullet plumped into the wall close by Lucinda's head.

She heard a voice cry out again and again, "Bel! Bel! Bel!"

Her own voice.... and for a long time hung in dread upon the issue of the swaying combat: while Bel clung to the woman's arm, muttering and pointing in futile efforts to wrest her weapon away; while Nelly claved, bit, kicked and pounded her free fist repeatedly into Bel's face, and wrenched madly at her captive wrist.

Of a sudden, from her hand a spiteful tongue of flame licked out at Bel, his right arm flailed back and fell useless, agony convulsed his features. Free, the woman bounded away and with a laugh of maniac glee swung the pistol to bear upon his head.

Without knowing what she did Lucinda flung herself upon Nelly's arm and bore it down. With deflected muzzle the pistol exploded for the last time. Dropping it, Nelly turned on Lucinda and dealt with her as might a madwoman. Impressions grew confused beyond assortment, of flopping wildly this way and that, of hot breath beating into her face, of her bare flesh suffering a rain of cruel blows.

Thrown off without warning, how she couldn't guess, she felt herself flying back, tripping, falling. Something struck the back of her head a stunning blow, and she knew flickering nausea while dense night like a moving cloud on every hand closed upon her.

Choking and coughing, she unclosed her eyes upon the vision of Bel's face. A hand holding a bottle of smelling salts dropped away from her nose. Bel saluted her reviving intelligence with an even growl: "You'll do now, I guess. Try to pull yourself together. No time to lose."

"My head aches...." She saw Bel in his shirt sleeves, with the cuff turned back above his right elbow, the forearm rudely bandaged with torn linen on which a deep stain was spreading.

"But Bel—your arm—"

"Hurts like hell. Butler plucked through the underside from the wrist to the elbow, nearly 'tilled' dead if you hadn't jumped for her."

"And if you hadn't come through the window when you did. But...."

Lynn.

Bel laughed shortly. "The evil-lent Mr. Summerlad's still breathing. That's all we can tell till the surgeon gets here."

"What became of—her?"

"Got away clean, worse luck—"

ducked past me and through the window like a shot."

Summerlad lay where he had fallen, on the far side of that piece of furniture. His face, upturned to the staring light, was like a thing of sculptured ivory, expressionless and blanched. The shirt beneath the flowered dressing gown was hideously blotched.

"You think.... O Bel! do you really think he will live?"

"No fear," Bel sneered. "He'll make a fool out of many another woman before he's finished. My chauffeur will run you down to the hotel. I think he's to be trusted. Wish I felt sure of that, Jack."

"Sure of him?"

"Why do you suppose I'm hurrying you away? Do you want the papers to get hold of the fact that you were keeping an assignation with this actor when his wife caught you and shot him?"

Lucinda let her wrap fall. "If my relationship to Lynn is what you imply—then my place is here with him."

"Please yourself. But remember, the papers are going to make his capital out of this scandal in the movie colony. They've been itching for it for years, knowing it was bound to break out some day.... How long do you imagine it'll be before the reporters will ferret out the fact that 'Linda Lee' is Mrs. Bellamy Bruce? Do you want to sit in the witness-box and testify against that demented creature when she's tried for murder?"

"What you think...."

"What the devil do you care what I think? If you aren't what people are going to say you are, what are you doing here, alone with Summerlad, in his own home, at night?"

"The Lantines were coming to dinner, but—"

"But!" Bel snorted. "Oh, all right! I'll give you the benefit of the doubt, if that'll induce you to clear out of this before it's too late. And it isn't as if you could do Summerlad any good by staying. His fate's all up to the surgeons. I'll keep you posted on what the surgeon says."

He bent with painful effort and lifted her wrap. She took it without a word, swung it around her shoulders turned, and left the room.

THE STAGE

"Boomerang Bill"

A smashing big story of romance that leads thru the realities of the underworld is "Boomerang Bill" which has as its star Lionel Barrymore. It will be seen at the Appleton tonight and Saturday. The role portrayed by Mr. Barrymore is that of a New York gunman who commits crime for the sake of the girl he loves.

It rises to powerful climaxes and in a series of notable characterizations and it is said that Mr. Barrymore, quite eclipses all previous efforts in this picture. The adaptation is from the original manuscript by Jack Boyle which appeared in the Cosmopolitan magazine.

Starting Monday will be one of the finest photodramas of the year "Saturday Night." Directed by that master, Cecil B. DeMille, whose "Fool's Paradise" is still vividly recalled along with his other splendid efforts, "Saturday Night" is a story of exceptional appeal and its action throughout is as rapid as it is thrilling.

The settings are sumptuous and there is an all star cast of players including Theodore Roberts, Leatrice Joy and Conrad Nagel. "Saturday Night" promises to be one of the year's biggest successes locally.

William Gruselle and Michael Gillespie of Green Bay, were in Appleton Thursday on business.

GIRL IS EDITOR
BY DAY AND ACTS
IN PLAY AT NIGHT

Miss Inescort, not Yet 21, Has Busy Program Outlined for Herself

BY MARIAN HALE

One job at a time is enough for most of us. But Brieda Inescort thinks you miss a great deal of the zest and excitement life can be made to yield if you confine your activities to one line of work.

That's why she edits ship news and writes encyclopedias by the day and acts by night.

"Now wouldn't I be bored sitting around all day, if I just acted, and what would I do with my evenings, if I just worked during the day?" she asks.

"I can do a number of things, so it wouldn't bother me if a show closed the week it opened. I can write, I can type, I can operate a switchboard take dictation, and I've adored being an 'information department.' And these things are always ready money."

"The reason so many girls have a hard time on the stage is because they believe they injure their prestige as actresses if they clerk in stores or work in offices between engagements."

"I have no illusions about the stage, or about anything else being pleasant forever. Success in any line is a hard game. I'm not sure I would want to work hard enough and exclusively enough at any one thing to be a great phenomenon."

"Specialization is not my aim. Not being bored is."

Miss Inescort is almost 21.

"When I was 16, just out of a convent, I understood my mother, an actress in England—I thought I could trust mother not to be ill—and I taught myself stenography."

"Then I took a job—I was secretary to Lord Astor for two years. And I used to write for London newspapers."

"Then I came to America and got a job as secretary over here. I found myself sort of bored, so I went to Winthrop Ames and told him I would like to act."

"He told me he would let me know if he had anything for me, and I considered the incident closed. Then I got this splendid job to write the encyclopedia and edit shipping news and I got all excited about Abyssinia and forgot Broadway."

"Then Mr. Ames came back, offering me a good part in 'The Truth About Blayds.' 'So I took five weeks off for rehearsal, then came back to my job. And now for several months I've been doing both, and I'm not tired a bit.'

"I get home every night before midnight, have a glass of milk as a midnight supper, and go to bed. Then I'm ready to get up by 8 and to work by 9."

"The grand part of it is that I'm saving money and buying bonds, and I may burst into a capitalist any of these days."

Ends 50 Years
As Teacher In Public School

Hutchinson, Kas.—With the end of this school year Mrs. Esther M. Richardson closes a career of nearly half a century as teacher in the Hutchinson school.

Her first teacher's experience was in Athens, O., in 1858. In 1876 she began her work in Hutchinson. Except for two years abroad she has continued at it ever since. Gray-headed men and women of today were among her early pupils.

Mrs. Richardson was born in Ohio 82 years ago in September. Only love of her work has kept her teaching so long, for she is well-to-do and her daughters are rich.

IF YOU ARE WELL BRED

You will refrain from making comments on clothes and personal attributes of others.

Often you will notice one woman make a careful appraisal of another's appearance even while she is being introduced. This is impolite.

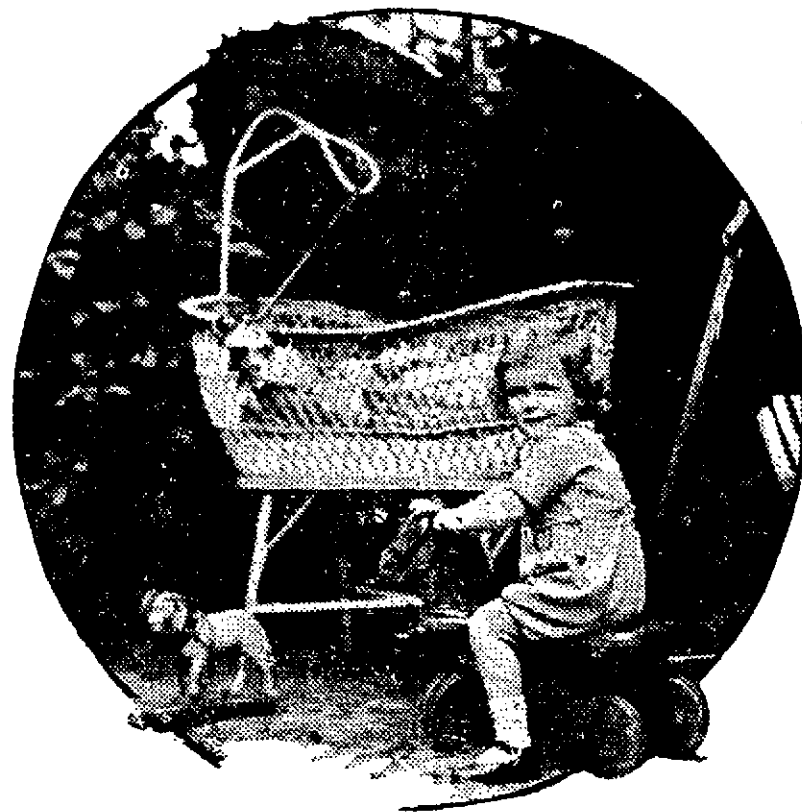

The most charming hostesses always try to keep conversation interesting and spontaneous, but not personal.

Autoists Hike

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore A. Glaser have established a record for long distance hiking. While returning from the northern part of the county the axle of their automobile broke, making it necessary for them to temporarily abandon it. After walking two miles they got a ride of three miles to Black Creek and from there walked to Twelve Corners, a distance of five miles. At the latter place they engaged a relative to bring them home.

YOUR BABY IN HOT WEATHER
Head Off Rash

COOL AND COMFORTABLE—THEREFORE HAPPY

BY MRS. MAX WEST
Late of the United States Children's Bureau

The skin is a wonderful organ, doing work of immense importance to health at all times. But in hot weather, when its millions of tiny pores are working to cool the skin, it is more important that this work of cooling the overheated body should be able to do its work well.

If a baby is cross and unhappy, it may be suffering from what is known as "prickly heat," from the stinging sensation that accompanies it. The fine red rash appears first on the chest and back, and often runs over the cheeks and arms and other parts of the body.

It is common in babies who are too warmly dressed, especially in those who wear too much and too heavy underwear. The first remedy is to remove the surplus clothing, and to exchange the heavy shirts and bands with very lightweight ones. The next thing to do is to give the baby a cool or tepid bath to remove the excess of perspiration.

If the skin is well covered with the rash a bran or a starch soda bath may be tried. These baths have lately been described in this column. Never use any soap on the inflamed surfaces no matter what the cause.

Handle the baby as little as possible, and keep him wherever the coolest spot is to be found. This rash usually subsides as soon as the weather cools. A dusting powder which may be tried, is composed of two parts of starch and one of boric acid sifted together, several times. Fat babies are more in need of powder than thin ones.

Whenever two surfaces touch as between the legs and under the arms, or in folds of fat about the body, powder should be used to prevent chafing, but it is not needed on the surface of the body generally, and if used profusely only serves to check and hinder the activity of the skin.

Chafing sometimes results from improperly washed diapers. Soap powders should never be used in this part of the laundry work, and whatever the soap used, the diapers must be rinsed with unusual care afterwards, unless the baby is to suffer. Cleanliness is the first remedy for chafing.

Use no soap, and if the flesh is quite sore, no water. Wipe off the skin with olive oil until the inflamed places heal over. Never use a diaper a second time without washing it.

LEARN A WORD
EVERY DAY

Today's word is SACRILEGIOUS.

"It's pronounced—sac-ri-lee-jus," with accent slightly on the first and more strongly upon the third syllable. It is "often," Webster remarks, "erroneously pronounced, even by educated speakers, as if spelt sacrilegious."

It means—in violation or profanation of sacred things.

It comes from—Latin "sacrilegus," that gathers or picks up sacred things; a combination of the two Latin words "sacrum," sacred or holy, and "legere," to read or gather.

It's used like this—"Any suggestion that their country has not the right to use force if Germany should default in reparations payments is treated by French statesmen as almost sacrilegious."

SUMMER DRESSES FOR GIRLS

Given a very young woman ardently devoted to the making of mud pies, and the mortality among her dresses becomes terrific.

That is why harassed mothers sigh with relief that summer dresses may be simple. Half a dozen of them can be made in no time at all and they are equally easy to launder. Sleeveless aprons of the same general cut may

NAVY VETERANS TO FORM ASSOCIATION

All United States navy veterans in Appleton and vicinity are to be formed into an organization similar to those adopted by army units, according to plans launched by a group of former sailors. A committee was appointed by the men who assembled for the Memorial day parade and organization plans will be drafted. Members of the committee are Charles Sparling, George C. Dame, Bert Martin and E. L. Madison. These men expect to meet at once and will call a conference of approximately 100 naval veterans who reside here.

Household
Hints

FOR THE BEACH

Rubber capes for beach wear are cut on the lines of popular street models and are sometimes as elaborate as the evening wraps. A stunning white collar and a corsage of red roses—in rubber, of course.

COSTUMES

Nearly every costume has its cape or coat that makes it present a different appearance on the street than in the home. Sleeveless coats, cut straight and varying in length from very long ones that reach nearly to the hem to boleros, are very fashionable for mid-summer.

FLOOR WAX

The best wax for a floor is made of a mixture of beeswax, paraffin and turpentine.

FANCY CUFFS

By their sleeves you may know the smartest frocks. There is a tendency now to have the sleeve fit more closely about the armhole, but let it have all the latitude it likes about the wrist. Some of the fancy cuffs are very wide and flowing.

WASHING BRUSHES

Brushes should never be washed in hot water. It makes the bristles soft. Put them in a quart of luke warm water into which two tablespoons of ammonia have been put. Let them remain so for half an hour and then rinse them in cold water and hang them up, brush down, to dry.

NEW SHOE STITCHING
MACHINE IS ODD DEVICE

Frank Stoeckbauer, shoe repairer, has installed a modern stitching machine in his shop at 902 College-ave., that will prove to be a considerable timesaver in his business. The machine is of a make that was used in the army during the war. A feature of it is the heating of the wax by electricity instead of gas. It is capable of making from 360 to 400 stitches in a minute. Hand stitching a shoe requires nearly an hour. The machine will do the same work in a few seconds. The machine is driven by a motor.

OUR FIRST YEAR

Chapter 49 — Old Man Woos Flapper

By a Bride

At the Main street station I found George Bradshaw patrolling the causeway for auto traffic. A red-cap near by guarded two splendid pieces of baggage.

Certainly a man of his tastes would appreciate a millionaire father-in-law.

At first I thought I would go right up to George and tell him frankly I was there because Mr. Tearle had asked me to keep him and Bonny apart.

And when Bonny arrived I'd let her storm, if she wanted to. And George could rage. But if it was in any person's power to dissuade that flapper I ought to make an effort.

And if I couldn't, I'd wire Mr. Tearle to meet them when they stepped from the train in New York.

Either way, Bonny would be saved. So there was no particular sense in talking to G. B. before the child arrived.

I was a dull, commonplace, little figure in the big crowd, rather uncomfortable, too, without my breakfast, impatient to have it over.

George Bradshaw grew conspicuously restless as the minute for the departure of the train approached—and Bonny did not arrive.

"And well may he worry," said I to me. "I suppose G. B. could coax a dozen beauties, of all ages, to run with him, but not another one with the millions he wants."

Adventures Of
The Twins

The Glass Mountain

Nancy and Nick were getting along finely as they journeyed across the Glass Mountain.

They took the advice of the Rubber mountain and went up backwards, so that when they took a step forward they would slip two steps backward, all the time getting nearer the top.

Finally they reached the tip top summit, which, if you look in your geography book, you will learn is the highest point.

"Hurrah!" cried Nick. "Here we are! Now for a jolly slide down the other side." He clutched the photograph record tightly, for it would never do to lose it after they had come so far, and had had such a hard time to get it. Of course, the record had forgotten his message, but the magic red feather pen in his pocket had written on the magic paper that they had better take it along anyway. The Princess Therna would know if it was the right record—if it was the message from Longhead, the Wise-man, who lived at the third end of the earth.

But something happened. At the very top of the Glass Mountain stood a large class prism with sharp corners. Suddenly the sun's rays, or something equally bright, struck it and it flashed like a thousand streaks of lightning straight into the eyes of the Twins.

"Oh, I can't see!" cried Nick blinking hard.

"I'm blind," screamed Nancy, rubbing her eyes with both hands.

But no matter how they blinked and rubbed and winked and twisted, the blinding gleams dazzled them so completely that they couldn't tell north from south.

Even the magic red pen couldn't help. Any message it would write would be useless, for the Twins could not see the words.

Small wonder then that when they stumbled down the mountain they took the wrong path.

Not Twice the Size, but Twice the Soap per Bar

Would you buy cornmeal mixed with sawdust simply because it might be cheaper than a similar sackful of pure cornmeal? Then, why buy ordinary white or yellow laundry soap when it is mixed with "filler" to make a little soap look like a full-size bar?

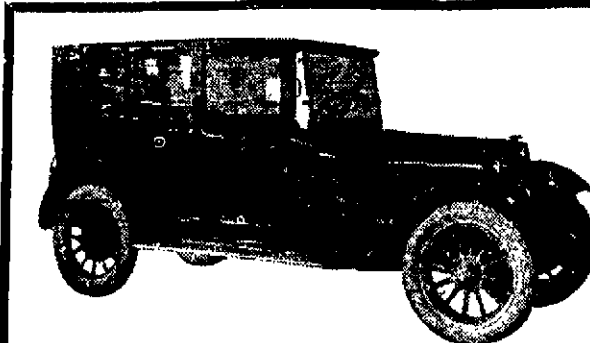

This may be news to you, but it's something fabric makers have known for years. They avoid the common laundry soap and wash their materials with olive oil soap.

All the energy you spend rubbing "filler" into clothes is wasted, for the "filler" has no cleaning power. Worse than that, it cuts and rots the fabric. Soon little holes and thin spots appear and you blame the goods or the woman who washes.

Get the new, large, greenish laundry bar called GREEN ARROW, confining—not "filler"—but real olive oil and naphtha. It's the olive oil whiteness, softness and sweetness that makes new materials so attractive when you buy them. You can keep your clothes like new if you wash them with a soap like this.

Pure GREEN ARROW is made by The Palmolive Co. No soap maker could afford to use olive oil in a home laundry soap if it were not for an enormous output of olive oil products, in which The Palmolive Co. leads the world. Every home that gets this large greenish laundry bar gets the benefit of their quantity production in the form of a finer laundry soap than you ever dreamed you could have, and one that goes nearly twice as far as the ordinary because it is all soap—hence all cleaning power.

It never makes hands red, dry or rough. Order it from your grocer, but be sure to use less soap.

Ham And Pineapple

HAM AND PINEAPPLE

One slice ham through center of joint, 1/2 cup pineapple cubes, 2 whole cloves for each pineapple cube, paprika.

NOTHER delicious combination of meat and fruit into an appetizing and wholesome dish is ham and pineapple. The pineapple serves admirably in supplementing the ham and bringing out its flavor.

Trim fat ham and rub over a hot frying pan. The spider should be very hot. Put in ham. Stick two cloves in each pineapple cube and add to ham in frying pan.

Broil first on one side, then turn and broil on the other. When the ham is seared on both sides cover the frying pan. This will draw the juice from the pineapple and the fruit and the meat and fruits flavors will be blended.

Put ham on a hot platter and sprinkle with cubes of pineapple. There should be some fat and drippings in the frying pan.

Add one cup of water and bring to boiling point. Add caramel if necessary to make brown and thicken with one tablespoon flour stirred to smooth paste in a little cold water.

Let boil five minutes, stirring constantly after the flour is added.

Fur Talks
By KISS

The foresighted woman attends to her fur repairing now so that she receives the double benefit of summer prices, which are lower, and the special attention which it is possible to give in a greater degree at this time. In addition, she avoids the possibility of disappointment when she wants her furs for winter.

Attention to storage should no longer be sidetracked, as during the warm weather furs require special attention and treatment.

Food that makes red blood!

Kellogg's whole-wheat KRUMBLES—with the full, enticing flavor of whole wheat for the first time—are wonderful makers of red blood, of bone, and of tissue!

Compare the red-blooded man or woman with puny, undernourished types, then you'll realize why every child should eat KRUMBLES every day to become rugged and enjoy robust health; to become physically courageous and mentally keen; to be able to go into the world READY to take a leading part!

KRUMBLES are a perfectly balanced food. They contain every vital food element! KRUMBLES counteract the effect of the denatured foods we eat—foods robbed of life-sustaining elements!

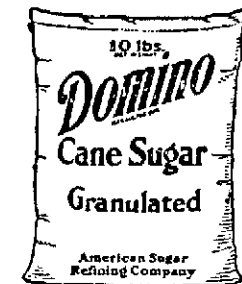

KRUMBLES eaten daily renew the strength of men and women workers and provide food that sustains the aged. All grocers sell KRUMBLES!

The only whole-wheat food with a delicious flavor!

WIG-WAG SIGNAL ON STATE STREET

In order to give 24 hour day protection at State-st. crossing, the North Western Railway Co. has decided to install a wig-wag signal which will be operated by three shifts of flagmen at College-ave. crossing.

Philip Schneider, flagman at State-st. crossing, will be transferred to Locust-st. crossing, which will then have two flagmen who will be on duty from 7 a. m. until 11 p. m.

College-ave. flagmen will set the wig-wag signal in motion before leaving their headquarters to warn traffic of approaching trains and will disconnect it upon their return.

OSHKOSH CANCELS ITS VALLEY SCOUT RALLY

The Fox river valley boy scout field rally, originally set for Saturday, June 3, has been cancelled, according to word received Thursday by H. P. Buck, scout executive, from Paul Simonds, Oshkosh executive. Inasmuch as only four troops had made entries, it was advisable not to hold a rally for so few. The Appleton scout team was all prepared to go and had a wall set up for wall scaling practice. The boys were not a little disappointed.

We Are Proud To Recommend

E-A-CO FLOUR

Our customers who use E-A-CO Flour have thanked us many times for recommending this splendid flour. We attribute this satisfaction to the following:

E-A-CO Flour is milled from the cream of sweet, sound healthy wheat kernels — the kind that nature intended you to have to build bone and muscle. It is uniformly granulated so that each particle of flour has exactly the same proportion of gluten. This insures a high, light, even loaf of bread every time you bake.

And, further, every sack is guaranteed to make more and better bread with a richer, creamier, white color and silky texture or your money is promptly refunded. Phone us today, please.

TUBERCULIN TEST Does Not Protect

Tuberculin testing does not give a satisfactory protection for market milk. It is a highly valuable test for the live stock industry and when conscientiously carried out will serve as a guide for weeding out many tubercular cattle from our dairy herds. But it cannot be depended upon to pick out all tubercular animals.

Even where the test is carried out "religiously" at six month intervals the test may fall down on some of the most badly infected cases, even more often where the disease is still in its incubation period. Persistent re-testing will gradually pick out the infected animals; but what about the babies who are fed on this milk during the years that it takes to build up a tuberculosis free herd. Then too, we must remember that the dairyman breeder is constantly adding to his herd cows that may or may not have been tested correctly.

In an Oklahoma herd of twenty-three cows tested recently, twenty reacted to the tuberculin test. Authorities usually agree that where this proportion of a herd react to the test that all of the herd probably have the disease. The news report of this instance, however, does not state that the milk from three non-reactors was kept off the market.

The most important part of the entire affair was that all but two of this same herd had been tested a year before and all passed the test.

This is only one of the many instances that prove the weakness of the tuberculin test as a safety measure for market milk.

Even, take it for granted that milk from tuberculin tested cows guards against Bovin Tuberculosis, what about all the other diseases often times carried in milk, diphtheria, typhoid, scarlet, septic, scar, etc., intestinal disturbances among children, and summer complaint among the babies? Did you ever consider that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure? Therefore to protect yourself, your children and your babies, use Contamo-Tested Pasteurized Milk.

PURE AND SAFE? ABSOLUTELY!

The overall image has a high-contrast, grainy appearance.

CASTOFFS MAKING GOOD WITH MACKS

Philadelphia Athletics Show More Strength Since Picking Up Waivers

Two castoffs have rounded out Connie Mack's ball club. They are "Pep" Young of Detroit and "Doc" Johnston of Cleveland.

When Cleveland secured "Stuffy" McInnis from Boston to play first base there was no place for Johnston.

The Cleveland club asked waivers. All the major league clubs except the Philadelphia Americans waived.

During the winter Connie Mack had purchased from the Milwaukee club Hauser, the star first sacker of the American Association. He was figured on as a certainty for first base.

PUT IN A CLAIM

Mack was unable to agree an salary with the recruit. In order to protect himself he put in a claim for Johnston.

The Cleveland castoff has gone so well up to date that Hauser, who has since agreed on terms, has no chance of breaking in as a regular at this time.

All last year "Pep" Young of Detroit had trouble with his throwing arm. The arm seemed strong enough but lacked accuracy. This spring the old fault was still with him. Manager Cobb of the Detroit club asked for waivers. Mack was the only manager to put in a claim for Young.

CHANGE OF SCENE

Mack believed that Young's trouble was purely mental, and that a change of scenery also might work wonders for Johnston.

His opinion has been verified, for both have played great ball for him. In discussing their cases Mack simply says:

"The addition of Young and Johnston has made my club. I was positive neither was through as a big leaguer and that they would deliver for me. Their fine work has exceeded my fondest expectations."

FINDS BIG SHELLS ON FARM; LIBRARY GETS ONE

Special to The Post-Crescent.
Now London—An interesting specimen in the form of a giant sea shell was recently presented to the public museum in the library by John Loss of Waukegan. While excavating a boulder on his farm, Mr. Loss discovered a row of twelve of these large shells at depth of 18 inches all placed on end and arranged close together. The discovery harks back to the days when the trade custom existed among Indians, for shells similar to this specimen are native to the South Atlantic on the Gulf of Mexico. The shell is ten inches long.

CHILD'S HAND HURT
While playing with the machinery used in raising the high steel radio tower at the rear of the F. H. King residence, last week, seven-year-old Donald King caught the finger of his left hand in the gears and injured the fingers severely. The tip of one was taken off and the other was badly bruised.

Sells Residence
Joseph Forster has sold his residence property on Packard st. to Charles Ritter. Mrs. Gertrude Heibel has sold two lots on Roger ave. to William Francis and John Milbow. The sales were made by Laubs & Sheperd.

Postpone Honor Court
The court of honor of the Appleton Boy Scout council which was to hold sessions Friday evening has postponed its monthly meeting until next Wednesday evening at 7:30. School activities and commencement week were considered in postponing the meeting.

"Pa" Gibbons Has Never Seen His Boys Fight

Strange as it may seem, Papa Gibbons never has seen either of his boys, Tommy, the light-heavy, or Mike, the middleweight, in a boxing contest.

The two nag the "old man" constantly to step over and see one of them put the damper on some opponent, but dad always says "Next time. That bird looks like a tough egg. I wouldn't want to see you all set plastered."

Nevertheless Pa Gibbons reads all the dope after every fight, wishing he had attended.

A few years ago the "old boy" was out-smarted when Tom and Mike framed him into a private exhibition between themselves. During the melee Tom floored Mike, decidedly pleasing the senior Gibbons at the sight of the younger one "putting it over."

His greatest delight is to go on trips with his boys hunting and fishing. He was born in Ireland and came to the United States 35 years ago, settling in St. Paul.

FORESTERS HAVE STRONG BALL TEAM

Squad Loses to Marshfield But is Showing Signs of Great Strength

The Catholic Order of Foresters baseball team is preparing to cut a considerable swath in the ranks of amateur teams in the state this year. A formidable aggregation has been built up and a few more games to give the men practice is all that is needed to assure a team which will be a real factor in determining the amateur championship of the state this year.

Last Sunday the team was defeated at Marshfield, 4 to 3, on a muddy field. The local boys were unable to get going well on the strange diamond but forced the Marshfield team to extend itself.

Kraft, pitching for the Foresters, held Marshfield to four hits, but Donike of Marshfield was just as effective. Two errors were charged against the Foresters and three against Marshfield. Day was the receiving end of the Appleton battery.

Negotiations are in progress for games with Antigo, Oconto, Marinette and other northern towns. It is possible the team will make a several days' tour through western Wisconsin around July 4.

CONFERENCE TRACK MEET IN IOWA CITY

By Associated Press
Iowa City, Ia.—Coach Harry Gill's Illinois ruled as favorites when Western Conference track stars went into the preliminaries Friday for what is expected to be one of the most spectacular meets in conference history Saturday.

The meet is the 22nd renewal of the conference classic. The contest for second place was attracting the greatest attention Friday as most of the dopsters had conceded victory to Illinois.

Not only Big Ten stars but athletes from other leading universities of the middle west bent every effort to beat performances made in the eastern intercollegiate at Cambridge last Saturday.

Janet Taylor—Wife

By Virginia Lynch Maxwell.

JANET took the letter from the bell hop and banded him a coin. She was so eager to read the news from home, she could scarcely contain her emotion. It was strange that Ken had not written. It might be that he was ill.

She tore open the letter with the strange handwriting and found it to be from her neighbor across the corridor in the apartment back home. Mrs. Straton had been interested in Janet's illness, having two kiddies of her own, and now, as Janet hastily scanned the thin, white slip of paper, she was disappointed in its mere gossip.

"She read on. 'And now, Mrs. Taylor, suppose you tell me what I ought to do about your milk. You know there were two bottles outside your door last week, and when I found them in the evening one had come sour. It seemed such a pity, in these days of high cost,' etc."

Janet felt a tightening sensation about her heart. It could mean but one thing. Ken had not come home for two nights. A thousand questions began to crowd her brain.

In the midst of her cogitation, Carlisle rattled the knob of her door and opened it just enough to peep in her head. She was dressed in a short, satin bathing suit and over one arm she had flung a scarlet sweater cape.

"You're not going to tell about the hotel on a morning like this, Janet, are you?" she asked in a friendly tone.

"I really haven't had time to collect my thoughts yet," Janet replied at once. "I've made no plan for the morning."

Carlisle glanced at once at the envelope in Janet's hand, and a light of curiosity suddenly shone in her hazel eyes.

"Bad news?" she asked, with raised brows.

"Not at all," was Janet's quick rejoinder. But she knew that Carlisle had guessed that all was not well at home.

She walked across to Janet and laid a slim hand on her shoulder. "Cheer up, dear," she encouraged, "there's nothing in this little world worth worrying over. And when you get to be my age you'll realize it. Whatever it is, just forget it. That's the healthiest way to enjoy your vacation."

"Jump into your suit," she urged, "and let's take a plunge this morning. The air outside is simply glorious."

Janet hesitated a brief moment. But Carlisle was already taking down the plain little black cotton suit from its peg and unbuttoning it for Janet's convenience.

Down on the beach Carlisle cut a stunning silhouette in the group of bathers that played about the vivid white sand. She linked her arm into Janet's and the girl felt the sharp picture contrast as they strolled along the shore line. Carlisle occasionally dipping her silken toes into the splashing water as it rolled up to her feet.

Suddenly Janet saw Dr. McLean coming toward them. But he seemed not to see them, for he detoured from his original direction and bent down to sit on a gay beach rug beside a frail little blond woman who smiled wanly at him.

"There's our doctor," Janet remarked, in an indifferent tone. At once Carlisle was aglow.

"I don't see him. Where do you see him? Point him out to me, but for goodness sake don't let him see me looking for him."

Janet nudged her arm and nodded in the direction Carlisle's face underwent a swift change.

"Oh," she breathed, "he's with that Fleming woman. She's one of the smart set down here," as she watched them from her safe distance, "and I understand Paul is simply crazy about her. It wouldn't surprise me if we heard of his marriage in the fall."

Janet's pride was stirred, just as Carlisle expected her words would do. The older woman smiled ruefully at the little girl at her side and turned a battery of insinuation on her in the next moment.

"Why my dear Janet," she said, germinating the embarrassed girl, "you look positively ill over it. Heavens, child, I'd no idea the thing had gone that far. Paul McLean is a flirt, you know. And I'm sorry if he's let you believe his glances held anything of the personal."

"Please," Janet said hotly, "Dr. McLean has said nothing personal to me at any time. I do wish you wouldn't draw such hasty conclusions."

"Oh, come now," Carlisle teased, "he never sat in your room for an hour and a half the other afternoon taking baby's temperature and pulse. Why don't you be generous, Nettie, and let me in on your secret?"

Janet could not speak for anger.

Before she had time to bring herself back to normalcy she felt a hand on her shoulder and turned to find Dr. McLean himself smiling into her eyes.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES—Mrs. Ralph Lee White, of Whitestone, L. I., One of the Debutantes Brides of the Season.

ing into her eyes.

It was as if he at once sensed the antagonism that had arisen.

"Oh, Paul, dear," Carlisle was scolding in her new attitude, not caring to have the young physician know "the truth"—"won't you take us for a swim?" Janet and I were just going to take a little dip, and I know your company would be welcomed by—by both of us, of course."

"Not this morning, Carlisle," he begged off, "I'm taking Mrs. Fleming out to the new sanitarium in my car. She needs more rest than she can possibly get here, and her husband has wired me asking that I take care of her."

Carlisle colored slightly. And Janet knew she had lied about the Fleming woman and Dr. McLean. Not that it mattered to her, she figured, but Carlisle had deliberately manufactured the story for a purpose.

My Secrets of Charm

By Marilyn Miller.

IF you wish your hands to be as attractive as possible your first thought should be given to the finger nails. By them you are constantly being judged. And the well-kept finger nail is regarded as a mark of culture.

Every woman expects to keep her hands clean and white and her nails trimmed neatly. But this makes only for cleanliness. To give that charming effect of a well-kept hand the nails must be given more care than an occasional trimming.

One good manicure a week and a few minutes attention each day will be sufficient to keep the finger nails in attractive condition. But the process should be unhurried, the correct implements should be used, and the time must be devoted regularly to produce the right results.

To be able to manicure your own nails at home requires a little practice and the sort of instruments the professional manicurist has on her table. A bowl for water is necessary, large enough to contain enough warm water for the fingers as well as their tips, and broad enough to avoid tipping. A soft nail brush is necessary too. Then comes the nail file. Choose a long file of steel, very flexible, and with a rounded end. A cuticle pusher, rather than a cuticle knife, I highly recommend, especially in the hands of a novice. Much damage may be done with the ungraceful handling of the cuticle knife, but it is not well to indulge in this sort of instrument until you have become an expert at manicuring. In its place may be used the cuticle pusher which has a semi-blunt end and does the work equally well.

An orange wood stick, some absorbent cotton, a small portion of nail cream and polish with buffer are all necessary. A few of the luxurious accessories to the manicure toilette may be found in the dainty packages of nail white, cuticle bleach, liquid polish and nail rouge.

First, file your nails to the desired shape. The nails are dipped into the solution of warm water and pure fluffy soap suds.

Soak the nails in the soapy water for a few minutes. Remove, and dry with a clean soft towel.

The orange wood stick is applied

by rolling some of the absorbent cotton securely around one end, dipping it into the water and running it beneath the top of the finger nail. There will stand out a few ragged edges that need filing down. For this purpose the nail file may be employed. But there are small emery boards that do this work admirably.

While the cuticle scissors neatly removes the superfluous growth that forms about the base of the finger nails, I absolutely taboo its use. Cutting the cuticle is not only dangerous, as an infection may ensue, but the new cuticle becomes more tender than the previous growth. Eventually the cuticle is so ragged, having been chipped from time to time, that it is responsible for many of the painful hang-nails that so mar the beauty of one's finger nails.

There are, however, a number of cuticle removers on the market that may be employed. If you care to make your own cuticle remover, a good solution is compounded of lemon juice, peroxide, castile soap and boiled water. A two-ounce bottle of the solution may be made up at one time, as it requires only a small amount of the compound to soften down the cuticle at each manicuring. The lemon juice and peroxide for this amount of water is proportioned—two teaspoons of each.

Dip the cotton-swabbed end of the orange-wood stick into the solution and quickly run it around the cuticle at the base of each nail. Then take your cuticle pusher and bear down with quick movements so as to push the superfluous flesh back as far as possible.

Gradually this cuticle will fade away and a little daily massage will push the skin down to reveal the half-moon at the base of the nail.

At the sides and bottom of each nail a little nourishing cream may then be applied. It will tend to soften any hard hang-nails in their formation and nourish the skin to avoid dryness.

The nails are buffed to a lustre, with long, slow strokes. Quick, short strokes cause too much heat from the friction and are responsible often-times for the white spots or burns that are seen on the nails from time to time.

Chivalry Tests for Wisconsin

RECENTLY Governor John J. Blaine signed the bill in Wisconsin giving women in that State all rights of the law. Wisconsin is the first State in the Union to do this.

The measure removes all sex restrictions. It gives to women the right to "stand on the corner in trousers and chew tobacco," if they desire, according to one Senator expressing it during the hot debate in the Legislature when the measure was up for vote.

The women voters now have "the same rights and privileges as men in freedom of contract, jury service, holding office, holding and conveying property, care and custody of children, and in all other respects," the law reads.

"The various courts, executive and administrative officers shall construe the statutes where the masculine gender is used to include the feminine gender, unless such construction will deny the females the special protection and privileges which they now enjoy for the general welfare," it further provides.

It was through the efforts of the National Women's Party that the bill was finally put through. They opened the fight and kept at it until they had been successful in "freeing" women of that State. And it was Governor Blaine's signature that brought about the result and finally ended the long fight.

It may be interesting to note just how this new phase of feminism will affect the attitude of men toward the sex in general. Now that women are absolutely their equals in that State, will it affect men's chivalry?

It would seem sometimes that when the soldiers returned from war service and found their old places in business filled so efficiently by women workers some of the pedestal respect they had always evinced for the sex dropped away. It is a strange sort of psychology, but there has been that evidence among the stronger sex for several decades.

Women have always argued that the new status should not make any difference. And it would seem right. But that does not alter the inherent instinct of the male. For countless centuries it has been the primary function of the man to protect woman. And for centuries this instinct has become developed into a more chivalrous method, so that now, when the desire to shield woman should be in its most cultured state, we find a sudden reversion to the primitive when women were the physical equals of mankind and worked in the fields beside them.

Work to-day has become more systematized, and instead of actually working in the fields or stone mills as in the early days of civilization, women now set out from the house early mornings with their partners in marriage to earn their livelihood.

There are two sides to the civic question as well as the economic. And in determining the exact value of the new freedom women are striving everywhere to gain it might be well to balance the assets from the angle that embraces the psychological effect this new freedom will have on the chivalry every woman naturally expects as due her sex.

In the Shops

THE latest tweed sports coats are showing a circular back akin to the cape of last season.

GRAY frocks in satin and lace will be popular as the season progresses. All shades of gray are being shown.

LONG side panels on the new crepe frocks are edged with monkey fur.

HEMSTITCHED tucks form the only decorative note on some of the newest negligees. They are being shown in tans and grays for the matron and salmon, leaf green and old blue are popular for the young miss.

HAVE you seen the new arm-lets for evening wear? In place of the jade bracelets of Summer days, there now comes a flat band of ivory or tortoise shell to hide the vaccination mark. At its outer extremity there hangs a fluffy ostrich tuft to lend grace and charm in keeping with the color harmony of the frock worn.

SOME of the new French hat boxes have tiny inside pockets where sachet bags may be stored to keep milady's bonnets sweetly fragrant.

Latest Novelties in Lingerie

THE shops have burst forth with a multitude of colorful underthings for the cool days. It is as if the warm shades of old rose, canary yellow, dawn pink and orange would add a new warmth to the threatening weather charts.

Contrary to the opinion of designers early in the season, women have not taken so readily to the simple cotton undergarments they attempted to revive. Perhaps this was due to the fact that while the cotton market was at its lowest ebb and the white balize underthings were being made up, the designers added so much lavish embroidery to the simple foundation that the prices soared as high as the best shops were asking for the more fragile silk things that have come to be looked upon as de luxe.

Whatever the reason, silk undergarments still hold firm place. And in order to retain their chosen stardom they are being created now in the most decorative effects with all sorts of extraordinary trimming.

Fringe, for one thing, is being used extensively now on silk pajamas. It is a true innovation and a happy one for the busy girl who does not find time to launder her own delicate, lace-trimmed lingerie. She will look with favor upon this more sturdy trimming. If needs no ironing. Merely shake it out when the garment is pressed and it still bobs about in its silky grace just as before.

A dainty pajama suit is fashioned of heavy quality, pink crepe de chine. Around the neck line and sleeves there is a two-inch silk fringe in a deeper shade, almost bordering on rose. Bands of the fringe trim the bottom of the coat and lend a charming finish to the ankle cuffs.

Many of the "slip-ons" and "step-ins" women have come to adopt as a permanent feature of their wardrobe are becoming even more fragile in texture and design than the trend at first appeared. They are being shown now in the sheerest of net, in creme, ecru and white. And run in and out their fine surfaces to find colorful ribbons in the most bizarre tones.

There is an ecru slip of sheer net that finds its color note in the brilliant orange silk ribbon that threads its way through the top of the camisole bodice and around the waist line, drawing in snugly the loose folds.

It may seem a bit far-fetched to suggest that lingerie be designed to match up with every caprice of fashion. Yet that is precisely what the designers had in mind when they lengthened the lingerie slip in tone with the anticipated longer skirts. The scalloped bottoms remained, however, despite the fact that the fashion that allowed scalloping of the hem on the frock has waned considerably.

For some time now there has been a rumor that skirts, true to the Spanish influence that permeated all styles for this season, would be wider. Immediately the petticoat manufacturers began to clip an extra width for those satiny underthings in order to give the necessary foundation to the frock worn over it. We hope with the added width to petticoats and skirts that the style shall never become so exaggerated as to bring back those starved and ruffled petticoats of a bygone age that once held out, in ungraceful style, the very full skirts above them.

But to be on the safe side, it would seem, the manufacturers of underwear have cleverly fashioned a garment that will be appropriate either way the pendulum of fashion may swing. It is the "voke" petticoat with circular flounce beneath it. The petticoat may be worn with the full skirt and the circular bottom will do its anticlimactic work, or if the skirt widths remain slender as is hoped, the extra fullness, being circular in cut, will in no way interfere with milady's navigation.

Poems for Your Scrap Book

Endearing Years.

Though thy constant love I share,
Yet its gift is rarer;
In my youth I thought thee fair:
Thou art older and fairer!

In the haste of youth we miss
Its best of blisses;
Sweeter than the stolen kiss
Are the granted kisses.

She whom youth alone makes dear
May awhile seem nearer;
Thou art mine so many a year,
The older, the dearer!

Oven-Drying Vegetables

THE companies who operate in the warm climates to make those necessary winter stock vegetables such as dried beans, prunes, raisins, corn, onions, etc., have taken over the business of the housewife in the larger scale. But there still remains for the thrifty woman who finds that she may purchase fresh vegetables at a small sum in her community, or if she finds that her garden has yielded an over-abundance this season a new and scientific method of preserving vegetable scraps at home. It is borrowed, no doubt, from the principal of the great sun-drying plants of the West.

Drying soup ingredients such as cabbage, corn, celery, onions, tomatoes, turnips, potatoes, carrots and lima beans is a convenient way of having them on hand when that appetizing pot of soup on a Winter day is most inviting. Dried parsley and celery tops are valuable additions to the seasoning shelf.

Household Hints

GRAPEFRUIT stuffed with white grapes is appropriate for an elaborate breakfast.

ONION flavored syrup imparts an excellent flavor to water in which ham is boiling.

TWO parts of pork fat to one of beef fat form an excellent mixture in which to fry doughnuts.

SERVE crushed strawberries with honey, ice cream made with milk, cream, cornstarch and honey.

ALLOW two level teaspoonsfuls of baking powder to each cupful of flour when no eggs are used.

SCRATCH on polished furniture can be almost obliterated by rubbing vigorously with linseed oil.

FOR a couch cover nothing is better for combining good looks with economy than a tapestry couch cover.

IF you cut the tip of your finger when you are busy in the kitchen do not top to tie a clumsy bandage on it, but put a small piece of clean linen over the cut and then put on your thumb until your work is done and you can give the matter better attention.

Some fruits are better canned than dried. Currants, gooseberries and strawberries are not good material for the drying process. But a variety of other fruits like plums, black and red raspberries, prunes, figs, apples, apricots and peaches may all be dried at home in the oven.

Dried peas, young beans, cauliflower, okra, spinach and cabbage are considered by the specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture to be less satisfactory in flavor than other dried vegetables.

The oven of the cookstove may be used. The products to be dried should be spread thinly in baking pans or pie tins, and these are placed upon racks so that they are not in direct contact with the oven wall. The door of the oven should be left open so that the water vapor driven off may pass out, and the fire should be so regulated that the material may not be scorched.

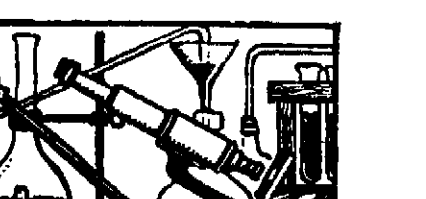

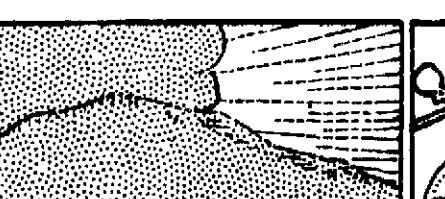

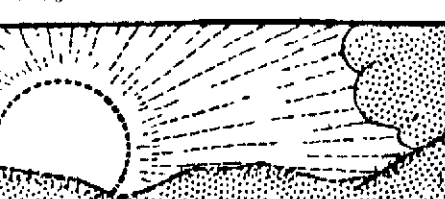

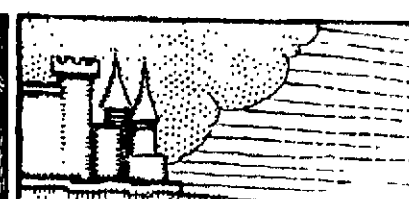

Trays suspended above a cookstove may also be used. Each tray is made of a rectangular piece of rather heavy galvanized wire netting having four or five meshes to the inch. The finished trays should have approximately the same dimensions as the stove top. The edges are turned back to form sides for the trays.

Four pieces of wood, one by two inches in thickness, form a frame for the drier which may be suspended by wires from the ceiling, or it may stand directly on top of the stove.

If the slats making up the frame are allowed to extend six inches below the bottom of the lower tray and a good-sized nail is driven half its length into the end of each slat to form non-inflammable feet upon which the drier may rest, the setting of the tray directly on top of the stove is permissible. Otherwise it would scorch and the products within would become blackened.

Once the tray is made it can be used from year to year in drying small amounts of vegetables that might otherwise have gone to waste. Drying is an easy process, much easier than the canning method most housewives try to avoid. And the only preparation necessary to making the dried products ready for use is to soak them overnight in cold water that they may absorb back the water that was originally taken from them in the drying process.

Directions for making and using various types of home-driers are given in Farmers' Bulletin 884, "Farm and Home Drying of Fruits and Vegetables." Nov. 6

"CROSS CROSSINGS CAUTIOUSLY" IS RAILROAD ADVICE

Rail Companies Make Special Effort to Reduce Number of Crossing Accidents

Posters announcing the "careful crossing campaign" to be conducted by railroads of the country between June 1 and Sept. 30 were posted in all railroad buildings, garages and other public places in Appleton by railroad employees Thursday. The poster is a large illustration showing a locomotive in the act of striking an automobile occupied by men, women and children. Above the picture in large letters are the words, "Cross crossings cautiously."

June, July, August and September have always been the worst months of the year for grade crossing accidents. The railroads are seeking the cooperation of automobile drivers, garage owners and the public generally in eliminating as many accidents as possible during the present summer. Local garage owners not only gave space for the posters but volunteered their assistance in making the campaign a success.

In 1920 about 3,000 automobiles struck on grade crossings. In these accidents there were 1,273 persons killed and 3,977 persons injured. The number of motor vehicles registered in the United States increased from 1,033,096 in 1912 to 10,449,785 in 1921.

ESSAY CONTEST FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

American Legion Offers Scholarships For Articles on Legion's Work

Miss Florence Jenkins, county superintendent of schools, is in receipt of letter from Garland W. Powell, assistant director of the national american legion commission of the american legion requesting her to point three judges in Outagamie county for the national essay contest, which the commission is to put on. Once she is requested also to designate a place where the contestants may send their essays.

The contest is open to all children between the ages of 12 to 18 inclusive, and the prizes are to be used by the winners in helping to pay for a scholarship in any college that they may designate. The subject of the essay is, "How the American Legion can Better Serve the Nation."

The essays are not to exceed 500 words and must be received at a place designated by the county superintendent of schools not later than midnight of Aug. 1, 1922.

The first national scholarship prize is $750; second, $500; third, $250. First prize in each state will be a medal and the second a bronze medal. Other prizes will be announced later. The cash prizes will be paid only towards scholarships in colleges designated by the winners.

The building will be 24 by 40 feet in size and will be constructed of cement blocks.

TWO HUNDRED WAYS OF USING ORANGES AND LEMONS

Eating is necessary to maintain life. One big difference between savages and civilized beings is that the latter have made a virtue of this necessity.

Recently science has demonstrated that raw foods must form a part of the diet in order that the body must not be undernourished. Four out of five New York City school children were found to be in this condition.

The use of oranges and lemons is a delicious and palatable way of insuring a balanced food supply for the body.

Any of our readers can have—entirely free—a booklet giving about 200 ways of using oranges and lemons.

Fill out and mail the coupon below, enclosing two cents in stamps for return postage. Be sure to write your name and address clearly.

Frederic J. Haskin, Director, The Appleton Post-Crescent Information Bureau, Washington, D. C.

I enclose herewith two cents in stamps for return postage on a free copy of the Orange and Lemon Booklet.

Automobiles Do Not Cut Attendance At Churches

"Automobiles are doing harm only to the country churches," said Rev. J. A. Holmes of the First Methodist church when asked whether automobiles were keeping people away from church on Sunday. "People from the rural districts are able to attend the churches in the larger communities because they can drive into town in a very short time. Many of the country churches are thus being deprived of their former members because they are going to another church, not because they do not go to church at all."

"Automobiles bring more farmers to church," said the Rev. F. L. Schreckenbach of the Trinity Lutheran church. "Many of the city people take weekend trips and are away on Sundays but our attendance does not fall off appreciably because during the summer when the weather and roads are nice, we have farmers come in from as far as Clayton."

"Automobiles give people more liberty on Sunday," said Rev. H. D. Pebody of the Congregational church. "When a man gets a new car it is a new toy and he must use it all the time even when he would otherwise be in church. The cars have little to do with church attendance for if a man wants to go to church he will go whether he has a car or not. I should say that as many cars are used to bring people to church as are used to keep them away and many who stay away would not come anyway."

"As soon as the weather is nice, the attendance at our 7:30 service increases while fewer people attend the later service," said the Rev. Paul Keicher of All Saints Episcopal church. "In bad weather the automobile is a decided factor in bringing people to church. I have one parish-oner who makes it a point to stop for other people on rainy Sunday so that they may come to church without getting wet. We have no late service during the summer, so I cannot tell very much about the effect of cars on that."

In most of the Protestant churches, the intensive church work is not carried on through the summer. The ministers feel that there is a decided falling off in the evening attendance because people ride all afternoon and are too tired to go to church at night.

A son was born Wednesday to Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Larsen, 1166 Gilmore st.

A daughter was born Thursday to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schwalbach of the town of Grand Chute.

WESTERNERS TO SEE DAIRY HERDS

Tour of County's Large Dairy Farms Will be Made by Delegation June 11

Outagamie county's best Holstein and Guernsey herds will be viewed by a group of about 25 Colorado and Wyoming men including, dairymen, newspaper men and bankers when a visit is paid to the county Sunday, June 11.

These men are coming to Wisconsin to see its dairy herds and study its methods of agricultural advancement. They will be escorted by Earl G. Reed, agricultural agent of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. Mr. Reed visits the state frequently buying dairy cattle, and has made heavy purchases in this county. Arrangements will be made to take the visitors from place to place by automobile, stopping at the farms where the leading herds are kept. The farmers would have preferred another day than Sunday for the trip, therefore are not planning an elaborate reception for the westerners. The program will be confined to an inspection trip, with officers of the breeders' associations as hosts.

Madison and its college of agriculture will be the first place visited, the delegation arriving there Thursday, June 8. They will go to Waukesha the following day, then to Oshkosh on Saturday, June 10 and to Appleton on Sunday, June 11. The last stop will be made at Waupaca, June 12, where the John Erickson herd and others will be shown.

SHOP TEAM WHIPS CLERK SQUAD-10-3

Kaukauna—Chicago Northwestern railroad shops baseball team is still the undefeated team in the Twilight league. In a game Thursday evening on the local ball grounds the shops won from the clerks by a score of 10 to 3. Brooks, pitching the first two innings for the clerks was knocked out of the box. Hass took his place and held the shopmen scoreless for the rest of the game.

The biggest feature of the game was a home run by Edward Hass in the fifth inning which brought in the clerks' last run and was one of the longest hits ever poled on the local diamond.

The railroad men garnered 13 hits, 11 of which were made in the first two frames. Cook and Hoffmann, hurrying for the shops, allowed six hits and fanned nine men.

MANY AT DARBOY MEMORIAL EVENT

Holy Angels Congregation Presents Burial Plot to American Legion Post

Special to The Post-Crescent

Darboy—About 400 people attended the Memorial exercises conducted by Leo Van Roy post No. 265 of the American Legion here Tuesday.

The program opened at 1 o'clock with a concert by Little Chute band. The parade was formed at 2:45 and marched to Holy Angels cemetery headed by Theodore Kamkes Koleske as color bearers and Fred Probst and Victor Hartzheim as color guards.

The band came next, followed by the firing squad consisting of Michael Sylvester, M. Mechl, Joseph Stumpf, Henry Uell, Joseph Palm, John Luniak, Joseph VanGroll and John Hartzheim. Henry Stumpf, post commander, was in charge.

Other American Legion members were next in line, including Chaplain Hugo Wittmann, Adjutant Herman VanVorst, Bartel J. Graff, sergeant-at-arms, and John Ashauer. Local church trustees who presented the burial plot followed. They were William Kamkes and Jacob Ashauer.

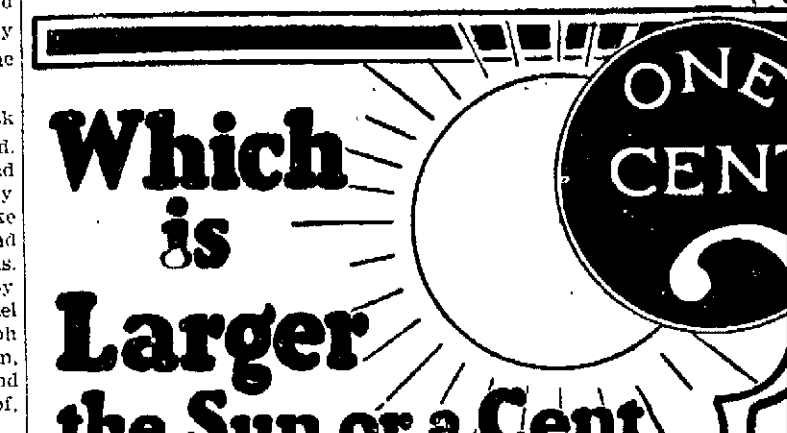

The other marchers were D. J. Ryan, president of Combined Locks, and George J. Schwalbach, Charles Grode and Joseph Brantmeier, officials of the town of Harrison.

Chaplain Wittmann read the opening prayer on arrival at the cemetery. Wreaths and flags were placed on the graves of deceased soldiers. These were the Beaulieu, Tully and Kona graves of the Civil war group and Leo VanRoy of the World war. The rifle salute was fired and taps sounded by Bugler Steven Peeters.

The parade and spectators then moved to the burial plot donated to the legion by Holy Angels congregation. The "Star Spangled Banner" was played by the band. The presentation of the plot was made by William Kamkes, trustee, who turned the deed over to Post Commander Stumpf and gave a short talk. The speech of acceptance was given by Adjutant VanVorst. The lot then was dedicated by Commander Stumpf and a prayer offered by Chaplain Wittmann. "America" was sung and the procession then returned to the park. D. J. Ryan gave the Memorial day address, after which dancing was enjoyed in the pavilion. Poppies were sold for the benefit of disabled war veterans.

KAUKAUNA PERSONA
 Kaukauna—Miss Gladys left Thursday for West Des Moines to visit relatives. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Collins left Tuesday at Mount Pleasant to visit Miss Helen Lamberger of Oshkosh and Miss Erna Pam of Greenville, who are home for the vacation after teaching last term. Mr. and Mrs. Archie Crevel returned from Marshfield last week and visited several days with friends.

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

In other words, don't be deceived by a few pennies—the cheapest baking powder in price is often the most expensive.

When you buy Calumet you know that it will produce pure, sweet, and wholesome bakings. You know that you use less because it contains more than the ordinary leavening strength.

Buy it—try it—be convinced.

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 ounces. Some baking powders come in 12 ounce instead of 16 ounce cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it.

terham, Vermont, to dwell in the fourth-floor, side, in that mean lodging-house, where all was ugly, tawdry, greasy, poor, and where even the tiny glimpse of sky her one small window afforded, was darkened by drifting smudge from the broad switch-yard.

F ATE which minimizes the bor-dom of eternity, by sticking us all on pins and observing us under the lenses of its cosmic microscope
—mightily diverted by our various reactions to that process—had willed it that "Spike" Leary should also be a lodger in the House of McCaffrey.
Spike's clever tongue had convinced
Mrs. McC. he was a book-agent out of work, and thus far he managed to pay his rent in advance, so there he had remained for upward of two months previous to the advent of Luella.

Spike was an old, tough, wise, scarred, and case-hardened as Luella was young, tender, ignorant, virgin, and soft. The world had handled him with a roughness directly proportionate to his rough handling of the world—of such portion of it as he had been able to get at, despite those annoying contraptions known as burlar-proof safes.

A good, conscientious hard-working yegg he had been in his day, and an artistic one, too; doing his duty as he had seen it, never leaving anything of value behind, and never unnece-sarily messing up a "crib" when "soupin' a box." And he had prospered, in the main, until one time when Fate's pin had slipped a little, letting him come in contact with a gentleman who had objected to losing $47.50.

Spike had never meant to hit that individual against whom he had entertained no personal animus whatsoever, quite so hard. Had the individual died, this story could never have been written; but he did not die. No,
the fractured skull had knitted again,
and Spike had had to do only a ten-year "bid." Those ten years, however, had taken the heart clean out of him, leaving him a derelict on the Sea of Crime.

At the noon-hour when Luella took possession of her fourth-story, side, Spike was sitting moodily in fourth-floor, back, cogitating on the vast discomfort that the pin of Destiny had caused and still was causing him.
When a yegg who loves his profession is past fifty, when the long watches of the night, behind steel bars and gray stone walls, have broken on his nerve, and when no "mob" will any longer take him in, who can honestly call the outlook alluring?
"Hell! I'm up against the cushion, no way to bounce!" quoth he,
getting out of his chair and pacing
the worm straw matting with the habitual cell-stride—four steps, turn, four steps, turn. Savagely, with the eyes of a caged animal, he glared at the misery of his room—the room which, none the less, afforded him some degree of safety. And as he paced he pondered the desperate state of his affairs.

NOTHING a curse, he fished up all his worldly wealth and once more counted it—$4.18.
Scornfully he slid it back into his pocket, the pocket that once had held hundreds, a few times even thousands.

"Some wad!" he growled.
He squinted from the window, as if in search of some possibility in the draft line that promised a rakoff, and fell to worrying the grizzled beard and mustache he had grown by way of helping him remain incog.
With dull spleen, his blinking, rendered eyes peered out over the city roofs—out over the vast, rich, busy hive where there was room only for successful men, straight or crooked,
but none for failures in either line,
none for such as he, unable to go straight, too weak and old and broken to go crooked and get away with it.
He yawned noisily, disclosing safron snags of teeth, lighted once more a half-smoked cigarette—bitt that lay on the bureau—a bureau scarred with innumerable cigarette-ashes along its edge—and was about to sink back into his chair again, when the sound of voices on the stairway arrested his attention.

Someone was coming up with Mrs.
McCaffrey; someone who had a gentle and a pleasing voice, not at all like the voices that usually resounded through this house from which all gentle folk and gentle ways had long since receded, like a tide at low ebb.
Spike Leary crept to the door and peeked through. Unseen, he could see. On the landing appeared Mrs.
McCaffrey, blowing like a whale, and beside her was a young girl. To this girl Mrs. McCaffrey was touting the virtues of her rooms; she was showing her into the fourth-floor side.
With the eyes of a connoisseur, Spike noted all the fine points of face and limb and breast, as well as the dim light on the landing revealed them.
He knew women, did Spike; and here,
he saw, was a good one.

"Some skirt!" he murmured, nodding with satisfaction. "If she canned them yep home-mades an' got doiled up proper, she'd be class, believe me!"

THE girl and Mrs. McCaffrey disappeared into the room. Spike opened the crack of his door a little wider, and listened, with an ear that had been "Cailliflowered" in some battle of the long ago. His bloodshot eyes narrowed with the keenness of his attention.
"Some voice, too, eh?" opined Spike.

"That there voice puts 25 per cent more onto her. This looks an' histen' good to me, all right, all right!"

Presently the sounds of conversation died to silence. Mrs. McCaffrey issued from the room, alone, with money in her hand. Well-pleased, the ex-yeggs grinned and nodded.

"Things may be breakin' right for me, at that," he said to himself. "I might put somethin' over with Cat-tivo, what? Maybe my luck ain't all on the Fritz. There's a few beans to be copped off here or my Bertillon ain't never been took. Buck up, kid, do, buck up!"

Spike Leary had just evolved an idea.

In immediate pursuance thereof,
Spike put on his hat and shambled along the hall, down the stairs, out into the baking heat of the South End. On his way through the hall he caught another fugitive glimpse of the girl, which had confirmed his first opinion of her. As he made way toward his destination, with the air of a man who knows where he is going, and what he means to do there,
he nodded and grinned hopefully.

The Old Glory Cafe, situated on an unseemly street running eastward out of Harrison avenue, received him presently through its swinging doors.
He nodded at the barkeep, whose greeting was but gaily in return.
Those who have lost their punch,
who can no longer come across, soon find their welcome cold in gin-mills.

Giving slight heed, Leary penetrated the back room, glanced around with cagy eyes, and found the man he wanted, the man he knew would be there at that hour. With worn shoes shuffling the sawdust, he drew close and laid a freckled hand on Cat-tivo's well-tailored shoulder.

Together they quitted the Old Glory Cafe, via the side door. Cattivo took his way toward Harrison avenue;
Spike turned in the other direction.
"Easy money!" he muttered in his beard, and he lagged along the sidewalk, hands in pockets, shoulders dragging slothfully.

Heartened by this cheering possibility, he quickened his pace, and with more energy than he had felt in a long time, betook himself back to his sorry lodging, there to ponder the details of his undertaking.

UNDER the lenses of the cosmic microscope of Fate, the human atoms in this experiment moved their appointed ways; and now on the fifth evening beheld Cattivo seated on the proscenium bed in the lamentable little room of Luella Buck-nall, while she, fronting the way mirror of her bureau—was putting on her cheap straw hat.

The door being open into the hall,
this situation by no means sagged below lodging-house standards. Also,
Mrs. McCaffrey was busy washing dishes in the basement kitchen, so there was no one to object.

Cattivo's Panama was tilted back at a debonaire and friendly angle on his brow, revealing smoothly-plastered hair. No cigaret dangled from his lips, for Cattivo quite understood the malapropos character of smoking cigarets in the room of this kind of girl.
To be casual, open-faced and free from vices was now his role, and skillfully he played up to it. Surely not even the most straight-laced virgin could object to witnessing "Heart of Gold" at an irreproachable movie house on Washington street, or to taking a drink of Moxie thereafter.

All the details had already been "fixed" quite comfortably, including the little refreshment-place, the Moxie, and the motor-car. Cattivo's eyes gleamed.

"Cinch!" he murmured to himself, rocking himself a bit on the bed, as he sat there holding his knee between clasped hands that never yet had known the touch of labor.

Cattivo was clad in his least conspicuous garb. Even his diamond was absent. The diamond, of course, was worth only $12.50, wholesale. Cattivo had used many such—mere chips cemented to a bit of phony stuff set in a ring of thinly-plated gold—in the pursuance of various "pennyweight-ing" games, when his favorite trade was dull. Instinctively, he felt that any such flashing jewel might not fall pat with a tale of unemployment.
It was, in fine, a very modest, chaste, and amiable Cattivo who now was sitting on Luella's bed with an air of entire candor; but his eyes, as he furtively observed her, were greedy, lustful, and calculating as those of a satyr spying dryads bathing in a woodland pool.

Luella had never been prettier.
Her made-over little muslin dress fell in lines so graceful that one hardly noted the fact of its being just a bit frayed and threadbare in places. The sash of bright blue ribbon, the touches of blue ribbon at neck and cuffs—
Five-and-Ten-Cent Store products—gave her something of the aspect of a live doll. A critical eye would have noted that her carefully blacked slippers were a bit scuffed at the toe and rundown at the heel, but who could be critical when the effect was so wholly charming?

"All ready, if you are," smiled the girl, with a final pat of the curls and a glance over her plump shoulder, at the vision in the mirror that smiled back at her happy face. "It's awfully good of you to ask me, Mr. Smith.
I've had such a dull time since I came to Boston—I haven't been anywhere or done anything!"

CATTIVO rose, smiling also, and stood aside to let her pass into the hall. But she did not pass into the hall. Up in front of her,
a sudden, gleamed a figure, shabby, bearded, stern. The figure raised a hand repellingly.

"Hold-on, there!" cried he. "Just a minute, miss."

"Oh, good evening, Mr. Williams!" ejaculated the girl, a bit startled and surprised. "What is it—another button?"

"Now! Somethin' more'n a button this time. You—you ain't goin' with him, are you?"

"Why—yes, of course."

"I say you ain't, see? He's—"

"Say, lay off that stuff, you rat!"
growled Cattivo, his face going dark.

"Cheese it, buttin' in on my girl!"

"Your girl!" echoed Spike, while his eyes scorched. "It's all off, this deal is!"

"Say—what's eatin' you, anyhow?"
"All off, kiddo," repeated Leary, while the girl stared with blank eyes of brown. "I just been packin' up my stuff, to blow, with the kale you slipped me, an' I come across my old pepper-pot. The sight o' that there gun put me thinkin'. An'—"

"Get out of the way, you!" snarled Cattivo; but Leary stood his ground.

"I can't go through, Tony," said he, his face "pinched white, just a tremble round the lips. "I been a two-fisted man in my day, an' me-be more. That was all right, too;
them was man-size games, anyhow.
I've cracked ribs you wouldn't ever dare look at. I've mixed it in scraps where you'd ha' got lost in the shuffle, first crack out o' the box. I'm down now, all through—down an' out. But when I seen that there old puffin' rod, 'Gawd!' says I, 'you ain't that low yet, Spike, old kid—not that low! Here, take y'r kale an'
let the little chicken slide!"

"What—what in the world—?"
gasped Luella. She turned to Cattivo.

"What's he talking about? What's the matter with him?"

"Aw, he's crazy with the heat!"
gibed the young man. "He's huggin' Cattivo was still trying to be merely casual, even jocose, though he had gone sickly-sallow round the fattish nostrils and the cruel mouth.

"The old nut has gone dippy, kid.
Come on, let's skate. We can't stick around here all night, listenin' to his rummy chatter!" He had Luella by the arm, pulling her toward the hall,
but Leary's powerful shoulders boomed before them, closing the way.
"Look—here, miss," persisted Leary, his voice tense as harp-strings,
"this don't go—see? I know this guy an' his whole gang, an' believe me, they're punk! He slid me thirty bucks to give him a knock-down to you.
Twenty-five he just paid me today,
an' five I touched him for yesterday.
His name ain't—"

"Is yours Williams?" snarled the slaver furiously, knotting his fists.
"Can the squeal, you pig, or I'll tip the buffs, an' then where do you get off? Say, I got your record from Frisco to Eastport, Maine—your record—see?—an' it ain't no music you'd want played over in no front office!
You've been panhandlin' pretty safe
a while, but you won't go longer if you kick into this. I can have you sloughed in for a stretch that'll make a lifer out o' you, an' you know it.
If I peep an' they tag you, it's goodbye for you!"

The fire in the old man's eyes died swiftly. The momentary flare-up of the spark went cold, under the observant microscope of Fate. Long years behind steel bars and gray wall had broken the heart in him; the long watches of the night in the inferno where

By all forgot, men rot and rot.

With soul and body marred,
had filled him with sick terror lost some day the portals of that hell should swing to drag him in once more.

Just a trifle he cringed back before the threat, but so slightly that Cat-tivo's squinting, rage-glazed eyes did not perceive him beaten.

Roughly he elbowed Spike aside.

"Get out! my girl's way!" spat he.

"Leave her pass! I'm goin' to have her for my steady, an' treat her right, an' no old runny like you is goin' to pull no buttinsky stuff, see?
An' say, you take it from me—blow while the blowin's good! This here place ain't goin' to be healthy for you after what you apilled tonight—
get me?"

Along the dark hall they passed,
he venomous as a cobra, she puzzled, indignant as Leary, clinging for protection to Cattivo's arm. Along the hall and down the stairs, leaving Spike Leary pale, trembling, sick, to grope his way back to his lair again,
a stunned and beaten soul.

TOGETHER Luella and her swain descended, while their footsteps beat like damning accusations in the brain of the broken yeggs. Together, she all light anticipation and excitement that not even the maunderings of the poor, half-crazed fellow above had been able to dispel, he harboring a secret dread through his exultation over Spike, lest Mrs. Mc-Caffrey by evil chance might happen to emerge from the depths and see them, and—as Cattivo mentally phrased it—"put a crimp in the cinch-est proposition that ever blew down
the pike."

But no crimp eventuated. No Mrs.
McCaffrey appeared. Down, down, down they went, their feet echoing hollowly in the uncarpeted and mal-odoriferous stairway. To the front door they won, unobserved, and through
it. The door, opened, closed as softly as Cattivo could close it; but not so softly that Spike Leary, fourth floor, back, did not quiver at the sound—
the sound that seemed to drive a nal nail in the coffin of his manhood.

For a while Spike sat inert in the chair where he had sunk down, starling with dull eyes at the suitcase he had half packed for a flitting to better quarters on the strength of Cat-tivo's thirty dollars. The suitcase was lying on the bed, and in it was the old "rod" that aforesaid had been Spike's true companion in many a "crush."

Stupidly the old cracksmen stared at the weapon. Then he leaned forward, took it up, and turned it in hands that trembled.

"What a hole she's bore in that damn Wop if I had the nerve I used to," he mumbled, his eyes momentarily glooming, then going dark again.
A long silence, then:

"I was a two-faced man once," muttered he, breathing heavily through his nose. "Me an' this here old gatt has went through some tough times together; but now—! Say, I'm a hot sketch now, ain't I? A hot one!"

His bleared eyes, wandering, met themselves in the flawed mirror of his bureau. Curiously he peered at himself, by the dim gas-light. For a minute he studied his own face, noting the ravages that time, hardship, perils, that hunger, defeat, jail degradation had wrought there, and fear and furtiveness, as well. His eyes had a strange, varnished film over them as once more he studied the gun in his hands.

"Panhandlin' was had enough for a man that was once what I was,"
quoth he, "an' swappin' bull for grub,
an' playin' cheap beaneries at night,
to sponge a feed on the strength o'
what I used to be! But this—this!"

Dazed, his mind dwelt vaguely on the long, descending spiral of his submersion. Some understanding of the thing he had become forced itself into his dulled brain. He saw himself a has-been, regaling the young recruits of the Underworld's grim army with tales of former prowess in exchange for booze, or setting the feet of youth on the hell-bound road of the drear pilgrimage of dope.

"A hot sketch!" he whispered, once more. "An' now I'm up against the cushion, right, Cattivo's pig on me, sure. I gotta blow, quick!"

PAINFULLY, stuffy, as though he had aged years in the past hour, he got up and finished packing his miserable belongings.
The Bible that good Mrs. McCaffrey kept in every room lay at hand on the bureau. Spike hesitated a moment, then took it up. Yes, that would have to go, too. Surely a man who had done what he had done would not now recall from stralling a Bible
—a book that he could sell, perhaps, for enough to buy a mouthful of rot-gule.

Idly he thumbed the pages, under the tired flicker of the gas. Arrested his attention. He paused, frowning with the effort of comprehension as he read:

Then Judas, which had betrayed him, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders.

Saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood.
And he cast down the pieces of silver . . . and hanged himself.

And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful for us to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood.
And they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field to bury strangers in.

Wherefore that field was called,
The Field of Blood unto this day.

For a moment Spike remained motionless, staring with strange eyes at the print that danced and quivered mockingly before his sight. Then, his teeth beginning to chatter as with a violent chill, despite the oppressive heat, he fished a pencil from his pocket, dug a heavy line down the margin beside this tremendous narrative, and dropped the Bible, open, back upon the bureau. With quivering fingers he clawed out the roll of bills,
the thirty dollars, flung them down upon the page and ehrank back from them fending himself from them with palsied hands.

"Gawd!" he whispered, "Even Judas couldn't go through with it!
Even Judas!"

Again his eyes cleared. The varnished film was quite gone now.
Again there burned in them a flicker of the feeble spark divine, struggling to glow amid the mists and vapors of that sodden soul.

Spike turned, fumbled in his suitcase, and once more brought out the gun.

A singular smile curved the bushy-bearded lips. Spike set the black muzzle to his forehead, closed his eyes, and drew the trigger.

MRS. McCaffrey, distractedly waddling up the basement stairs to the front hall—conscious of swift disorder, of wild cries in the passageways, of doors jerked open or banging shut—turned as the front door was unlocked and flung back. Staring, she confronted the officers, ominous under the vague pinpoint of the hall jet.

"Mother o' mercy!" she wailed. "Oh,
what do ye be raidin' my house for?
I keep a decent—"

They pushed her aside, two or three of them, and tramped on up the stairs. Then she beheld "Mr. Smith," her out-of-work bookkeeper, wax-yellow and manacled to a man in plain clothes.

"The black nose o' death to ye!"
she shrielled. "Bisterin' an' runnin' scores on ye, to be takin' a good honest lad like him, an'—"

"Hush, Mrs. McCaffrey!" exclaimed a woman's voice. Mrs. McCaffrey's four-winded eyes focused on Luella Bucknall. "Hush!" They're not raiding your house. They're only going to get the old man in your fourth-floor back—they want him for a witness in an important case."

Understanding nothing save that a pistol-shot had been fired somewhere above, that her decent home was filled with shouts and turmoil and noisy feet, and that unknown depths of scandal threatened to engulf her, Mrs. McCaffrey, lunging her gray apron over her head, sat down on the lowest step of her dishonored stairs, and fell to crying with true Celtic abandon.

"There, there!" the girl tried to soothe her, with pats on the heaving shoulder. Far above, a startled oath echoed down. A pause—then heavy feet came clattering from the upper regions.

"It's all off, Captain," shouted a voice over the bannisters. "He's croaked himself, clean!"

"Dead!" cried the girl, going livid.
"Oh—not!"

The plain-clothes man, his left hand bracketed to Cattivo, steadied her with his right.

"Buck up, Miss Everett," said he.
"We've got enough to shove this man on, anyhow. He'll probably squeal on the rest of the gang. Old Spike would have been good as a material witness, but we can get by without him."

"Yes, but he was white, white, after all!" she answered, in distress.
"Even after he'd taken the money,
he—tried to warn me, and—"
"If he was white," he's gone at a good time," the captain of the view squad put in. "Better now than latter, when he'd have slumped again.
And say, Miss Everett, let me compliment you. The way you led this book into our trap was a masterpiece. We haven't got a woman on the force that for juvenile make-up and innucent country stuff is as high with you!"

But the girl—no longer Luella Bucknall of Petersburg, Vermont, but Florence Everett, special investigator of the Department of Justice—did not hear his praise. She was crying softly.

VACATION SEASON HERE; SCHQOLS ARE DESERTED

Appleton schools are practically closed for the summer vacation. Lincoln school in the second district was deserted Friday morning with the exception of a number of teachers who were finishing up their work. In the high school students were loitering about the corridors and on the lawn while waiting for the final reports on their examinations. Most of the teachers left Friday or will leave Saturday for their homes, or on vacations.

SCHOOL PLAYERS PUT LOTS OF PEP INTO THEIR WORK

"Mice and Men" Presented in Creditable Fashion Before Capacity House

"Mice and Men" as put on by the senior class of Appleton high school went big with the packed house at Appleton theatre Thursday evening. All principal characters in the play took their parts well while the orphans in regulation orphanage uniform were delightful. It took them only the few minutes they were on the stage to bring many chuckles from the audience.

Clare Ryan as Peggy, made a most attractive orphan as well as distinguished looking young lady in the red velvet party dress which caused complications in the plot. Marjorie Davis as Joanna Goodlake, the beautiful wife whom her husband, John Leach, was certain was true to him made the fetching villainess of the evening.

John O'Leary as Sir Harry Trimblestone, a typical comedy Englishman of the Charles Dwyer type, played a hard character part well. LaVahn Maesch as Captain George Layell was indeed a dashing soldier lover. To Peggy, Joseph Henskill as Mark Embury, a scholar, scientist and philosopher around whom the action of the play was built, did excellent work, while John Beach as Roger Goodlake, the blustering and cocksure friend, played his part well.

Credit is due to Miss Rosetta Seegal for her splendid interpretation of Mrs. Deveraux, the housekeeper, who was intruded into the schemes of Peggy against her will. Theron Nemachek as Kit Barinzer, a fiddler and professor of deportment, made a good dancing master for the wilful Peggy, and Molly, a kitchen maid played by Dorothy Peterson had "sneaky" in approved exaggeration and chewed gum with considerable style.

Peter, Embury's servant was played by John O'Leary. Mildred Butler was the mother of the founding hospital and Andrew Leithan was Beadle of the hospital. The orphans included the Misses Margaret Wadsworth, Gwendolyn Dittmer, Edith Small, Florence Torrey, Helen Snyder, Dorothy A. Peterson, Miriam Leons, Clare Ryan, Alice Marley, Marian Matz, while the masqueraders were Fred Bendt, Lyman Clark, Stanley Gillespie, John Zussman, Harold Berro, Edith Small, Edith Smith, Margaret Wadsworth, Gwendolyn Dittmer, Dorothy A. Peterson, Romana Gehm, Mildred Butler, Geneva Blumichen, Lorraine Park, Genevieve Hyde, Loretta Maurer, Marian Matz, Florence Torrey.

The play opens with Mark Embury, a bachelor, in the process of adopting a ward with the intention of training her in the ways of simplicity and science in order that he may have a wife to his own liking. Ten orphans are brought to him and he chooses "Little Britain" whom he at once calls Peggy. Roger Goodlake thinks that Mark will be fooled in trying to train a woman in the way she should go and says so repeatedly.

George Layell, nephew of Embury has been having an affair with Goodlake's wife and in a search for a mature of her which he has lost he meets Peggy and falls in love with her on the eve of his departure for service in Ireland. Peggy is trained to be simple and sweet, but without the usual traits of women, according to her guardian's belief. She does not care for clothes, has never looked in a mirror and would rather run barefoot than wear shoes.

Mrs. Goodlake tempts her to go to a ball at a notorious hall, lends her a red velvet dress and she goes. Mark Embury who has proposed to her that evening now asks her love for George and apparently holds her to her promise to marry her guardian. Of course, she marries George in the end with the usual eternal happiness.

You'll Need Some Pottery To Get Proper Color Effect

"No that will not do. It is a little too bright for the effect which I want to produce. There now, the little squat yellow jar over there is just about what I want. Let me place it here on the shelf to get the light on it. Yes, that will do."

Everyone is buying small pieces of bright pottery, either the very expensive world renowned potteries of the French and Chinese or the domestic manufacture including such makes as Danatello, Mostique, Forest, Van Bruggle and Haeger. The Van Bruggle wear comes in the soft rose colors and dull tints, while Haeger includes brighter effects with glossy finish. Haeger pottery may be used in small quantity in bright yellows, blues, greens to give up a color scheme. It comes also in glossy black and ivory white.

The ancient designs used in Mauri wear, Salsuma and Majolica add lovely touches to the sombre woods used in the dining room. Lustre wear is also in much favor, while the colored glasses with frosted effect also are in demand.

And the kinds of things in which the pottery comes? In everything from hanging vases to pin trays and that takes you from the hanging vases to vases of every description. There are large little bud vases, then those which hold only a few flowers, squat ones with squat handles which are pretty as can be without any flowers. That is a point which is being brought out about the vases of late years. Time was when if a woman wanted to have a vase displayed, she must put flowers of some sort in it in order to show it. Often they were wax carnations. But not so now, for the vase is excuse enough for itself.

Colored glass fruit dishes in which either the real or very good imitation fruit is placed also are being used to great extent. You remember those old fruit dishes with the standards which your grandmother insisted on having on the dining room table ten or fifteen years ago. What would you not give for them now since the new ones are copying them in design? Black glass bowls of this sort are very good, but you will find them in many colors.

Of course colored candlesticks are used for color effects and ever so many other things. The craze for candle jars has somewhat died down but they do lend a pretty color effect to the tables on which they are placed. Covered boxes in tin with painted designs are also used for the color effects.

This is the comforting thing about modern pottery. The woman who knows a little about line and design and color harmonies may purchase very reasonably enough things to add the right touches to her plans of household decoration. With a skillful paint brush, she will be able to work out her own ideas along the approved lines.

WEST LAWRENCE-ST. WILL BUILD UP NOW

The extension of the water main on Lawrence-st. several blocks west to practically the old fair grounds means the building up at once of that part of the city. The trenching has been completed nearly the entire distance and the pipe is laid for a portion of the way.

Most of the lots in that part of the city have been taken up by persons who have delayed building new homes until they could get water connections. S. A. Konz of the Konz Box and Lumber Co. recently acquired 23 lots on which he expects to build several new homes for his workmen within the next few months. He is planning also to build an additional lot shed 50 by 100 feet which will be located near his present one.

DELEGATES WANT TO RESERVE ROOMS

Racine Will Send 20 City Officials to State Convention Here Next Week

Responses to the letter sent out by the city's convention committee to city village officials throughout the state urging early reservations for hotel accommodations during the convention of the Wisconsin League of Municipalities in Appleton June 7, 8 and 9, are coming in rapidly, according to Alderman J. T. Lippert.

The largest delegation thus far headed is from Racine. The city has asked reservations for 20 delegates. It is expected, however, that Milwaukee will send the largest delegation. Oconomowoc will send six representatives. Rhinelander, Reedburg and Delavan are among the first cities asking for accommodations for their officers. Large delegations also are expected from nearby cities and villages. It is thought that many visitors will make the trip by automobile.

Still Use Old Toll Gate At Sturgeon Bay

Visitors to Sturgeon Bay over Memorial day say the toll gate in connection with the bridge in that city is still maintained. It is one of the few toll gates left in this part of the country and the fee collected from visitors who pass over it is used for maintenance. The bridge is a wooden structure that has been in existence for many years and is extensively used by tourists.

APPLETON GIRL GIVEN PRIZE FOR EXCELLENT WORK

Miss Edna Becker Received Silver Loving Cup for Helping Freshman Girls

Miss Edna Becker, daughter of Mrs. Bertha Becker, 585 Locust-st., has won a silver loving cup for the best work on the freshman commission of Lawrence college. Miss Becker was chairman of the scholastic record committee of the commission which was formed to raise the standards of the freshmen girls. The committee consisted of the Misses Ellen Tutton, Palmyra; Edith Novotne, Ladysmith; Mary Bennett, Randolph; and Dorothy Oestrich, Janesville.

This committee kept a complete record of the scholastic grades of every girl in the freshman class. To those receiving the highest marks during the first six weeks, the committee sent congratulatory notes. At the end of the second six weeks, the committee arranged special tables at the dormitories for those leading in scholarship. Letters of congratulation were written to the parents of those who received the highest semester grades and a banquet was given for the girls. The committee also has been following the records of the girls who are weak in their work. Miss Ethel Hooper, Palmyra, had charge of the social committee of the commission and entertained 128 girls at dinner in groups of eight. Miss Irene Boehm, Appleton, was chairman of the standards committee which conducted a courteous contest in the dormitories. She was hostess to the girls who remained in Appleton during the Thanksgiving vacation at a "left over" party.

Freedom Girl Registers Millionth Holstein Calf

HILDA TECHLIN AND HILDA ORMSBY LADY

When Hilda Techlin signed her name to an application blank about two years ago admitting her to the Boys and Girls Calf club of the First National bank she little dreamed that she would be brought into prominence in the United States, Canada and other countries as well.

Fate plays a strange game at times, however, and now Miss Techlin is known in every locality where purebred Holstein cattle are raised. The young lady is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Techlin, town of Freedom. Her calf received in the club allotment is Hilda Ormsby Lady, pictured above.

The calf was registered as a purebred with the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, and it happened that this entry was number 1,000,000. The association could not pass lightly over this achievement of registering a million purebred animals, therefore sought pictures of Miss Techlin and her calf for use in publicity matter.

One of the latest publications of the association, entitled, "The Calf Club Manual," bears the picture of the girl and her calf on the front cover, together with a note that the millionth Holstein was a calf-club heifer.

Hilda Ormsby Lady seems conscious of the honor she has brought her own name, because she is developing into a helper of splendid type. She is the first purebred animal to be placed in the Techlin herd. There are two other calf club members in the family now, an older sister and a younger brother of Miss Techlin having enrolled and obtained calves.

Mrs. C. J. Wolcott of Dale is the guests of Appleton relatives. Lieut. Col. T. Byron Beveridge of Madison, visited relatives and friends here Thursday.

ARRANGE HOURS FOR JOB BUREAU

Hours Are Announced When Men May Apply for Employment

Free employment service at the Y. M. C. A. is to be conducted on a conference schedule plan hereafter, according to announcement of C. L. Boynton, employment secretary. This is done to prevent conflict of this work with other essential secretarial duties.

All men seeking jobs are to apply at the building only between the hours of 9 o'clock and 9:30, and 11:30 to 12:30 on any day of the week except Sunday. Mr. Boynton also will meet job seekers between 5 and 6 o'clock and 7 and 10 o'clock on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Men unable to come at these hours will be allowed to make appointments to see Mr. Boynton at convenient hours.

Applications now are on file for a group of Lawrence college students who intend to remain here during the summer and desire work which will only them pay their expenses next fall. About a dozen high school boys of ages 16, 17 and 18 also want summer work.

The supply of common labor jobs continues plentiful and all men asking such places usually are accommodated promptly.

Radical improvements in washing machine design make possible the Sunnysuds price of $100. It is a standard size, family washer—with steel frame, copper tub, aluminum wringer, ¼ H. P. motor and silent enclosed gears. See it—and let us explain our easy terms.

The tub itself is of the most advanced construction. The metal is pure copper of sufficient thickness to provide rigidity and resist denting. The seams are first folded and then soldered as a double insurance against leakage. The lid fits closely without locking and has a wide flange which prevents water and suds from seeping out.

When in motion, the tub rocks with remarkable silence; when stopped it locks in proper position to be opened for wringing.

The copper tub of the Sunnysuds is a revelation of thoroughness. Without the use of compensating springs, it is rocked through a wide arc with a sweep that sets up a powerful washing movement. The bottom is scientifically corrugated to supply the cleansing action of the washboard without its harmful effects.

Two perforated copper baffle plates are located above the water line to increase the efficiency of the washing wave by breaking it up into a foamy, swashing swirl of tiny streams. Rising several inches above the bottom of the tub, the arched hood of the sediment zone supplies additional agitation.

No dirt can long resist the Sunnysuds. Overall, dish cloths, bath rugs, obstinately dirty cuffs and collar bands come from the Sunnysuds tub delightfully clean and stainless. Its large capacity enables heavy blankets to be washed with speed and satisfaction.

Y. M. C. A. Instructor Declares Swimming Makes for Gracefulness and Health

Those who seem to have an inherent fear of the water should get in and learn how difficult it is to sink, is the advice of Everett H. Wright, who is helping promote the Y. M. C. A. campaign for free public swimming classes, June 5 to 19. Mr. Wright formerly was a physical director in the central Y. M. C. A. building, Chicago, and has written a pamphlet which is now being used as a text book for swimming classes.

"Man is the only animal who must learn to swim," he said. "Fear of the water seems to be born in us. But lungs filled with air serve to keep one on the surface of the water like any inflated object."

Mr. Wright believes that of all exercises swimming is the most beneficial as well as the cheapest. "In the first place," he said, "the scarcity of clothes allows the muscles to move freely. Arm movements are slow or fast, but always easy and long ranged. Leg motions have emphasis on extending and are never cramped, short or hampered. Breathing is regular, deep and full, while the air one breathes at the surface of the water is the purest and most free from dust. Thus we have the coordination of the three principal acts of swimming, breathing, leg movements and arm motion."

"Swimming will reduce corpulent persons, add weight to slender ones and straighten round shoulders. One's posture can be straightened and awkwardness can be turned into gracefulness. In addition, it will develop self-confidence and courage more than any other exercise."

Memorial Service In Morning Is Urged Here

Observance of Memorial day in such a manner that larger numbers of people will have a part in the exercises and more former service men can take part in the parade is one of the topics that is being discussed in Appleton.

This issue has forced itself to the front because only about one-fourth of the veterans of the World war participated this year and the crowds at the hall and cemetery for the programs were smaller than in other years.

It is believed by some that a morning program would accomplish this purpose. Most people like to take advantage of a holiday for outside activities and usually place picnics, automobile trips, ball games and other plans ahead of the memorial observance, it is said.

The suggestion has been ventured that people will gladly refrain from making any plans for the morning and will do their duty in honoring the deceased and living veterans of the wars if they are given the afternoon for a holiday—a time in which they may do the things of their choice. The advantages of parading and sitting in meetings in the cooler part of the day also are mentioned.

This subject probably will be discussed by patriotic organizations with a possible alteration of plans for next year.

FARMERS TOTE GUNS TO FIGHT WILDCAT

Center Swamp is Said to be Home of Fierce Animal—Home of Many Rumors

Center swamp is the scene of much excitement and many false alarms this spring. First a "wild man" inhabited the swamps and now a wildcat is prowling on the same territory, rumors have it. It has been reported that such an animal has been walking, strolling or prowling, or whatever a wildcat does, from the Stalld brother's farm toward the Daniel Smith woods in Grand Chute. Neighbors have since been armed to the teeth, it is said, and are extremely nervous after receiving a bit of uncanny advice.

It is this: He who is likely to miss his aim or who cannot shoot to kill had better not shoot at all, for he will never live to fire another shot.

Like the old pioneers, the farmers have but one recourse—to tote a gun wherever they may be working. Scoffers, however, consign the rumor to the junkheap along with those of the wild man who turned out

School Banks Are Helping To Promote Thrift

That children take readily to saving money as well as to spending it is shown by the banking records of the sixth and seventh grades of the Third ward school when the school bank closed May 26, 1922. Several of the children have more than $10 in the bank while 75 per cent of the children in the sixth grade and 91 per cent of the children in the seventh grade have accounts.

The total deposits for the sixth grade amount to $113.64, while the total deposits for the seventh grade amount to $153.64. The individual deposits for the seventh grade are smaller on the whole than in the sixth grade since one depositor, Miss Beatrice Miller, has $80.92 in the bank. The smallest deposit in the bank is 60 cents while many are under $5 with a few more than $10 and only two more than $20.

WEAK AS BABY AFTER A HARD ATTACK OF FLU

Milwaukee Man Says He Was Near End of Endurance When He Got Tanlac—Now Back in Splendid Health.

"I am feeling years younger since I took Tanlac," said Wm. G. Hauenstein, 628 Potter Ave., Milwaukee, Wis., well-known carpenter for the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light Co.

"My trouble started with my stomach nearly five years ago and I got to be almost a wreck. I would bloat all up with gas until I had sharp pains around my heart and awful cramps that nearly drew me double. My back hurt nearly all the time, awful headaches came on and I got so dizzy I would have to hold on to something. On top of it all I was taken with the 'flu.' When I got up I was as weak as a baby and I knew I couldn't hold out much longer.

"My very first bottle of Tanlac began to straighten me out. After taking four bottles I now eat anything with a fine appetite. I sleep soundly and am strong enough to tackle any kind of work. Tanlac is a wonderful medicine."

June Clean-up On Stoves

We are offering the following surplus stock of Stoves at a big reduction in price. This reduction is not caused by any lower prices in the stove market as we do not expect any this year for the price of steel is gradually going higher and will effect the price of stoves in the near future. We are giving you a chance to buy stoves at these prices merely to reduce our over stock. You are not buying an unknown stove from strangers when you buy either an ALCAZAR or FAVORITE. We stand back of every stove we sell. Never in Appleton has there been a bigger showing of Stoves than we are showing at the present time. But we can sell only the Stoves listed, as it is impossible for us to buy more stoves and sell them at these prices. When we are sold out on any of the Stoves listed we will have to buy more and ask the regular price for them which is much higher. Let us have your order now, and we will deliver the Stove later. Pay cash if you can, as it means a bigger saving on your purchase.
